CORNWELL RESIGNS POSITION; WILL BE HOME INSTRUCTOR

Road Patrolman To Resume Former Post, Is Said

Ozni H. Cornwell, county road patrolman, resigned his connection with the sheriff's office, effective Thursday, to become military instructor at the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, a position which he formerly held, he announced.

Cornwell succeeds Major Christine E. Nelson, who has resigned. Major Nelson succeeded Cornwell as instructor of military affairs at the Home September 28, 1927 when the latter resigned to become identified with the sheriff's office.

Major Nelson, whose home is in Marysville, O., has not announced his future plans, according to Col. Charles V. Burton, superintendent of the institution.

Cornwell will assume his old duties Friday. He will serve in the capacity of disciplinarian and will be in charge of the military training of the Home children.

His successor as county road patrolman has not been appointed by Sheriff Ohmer Tate.

The position of county road patrolman was created by Sheriff Tate February 1, 1927. The duties of the position include patrolling of the county roads on a motorcycle and acting as deputy sheriff.

Cornwell, who is also captain of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, is a World War veteran, having served with the Rainbow Division overseas.

He made his home in Columbus, O., for a time after the war and then went to Marion, O. He came to Xenia three and one-half years ago and became connected with the local guard unit. A year later he was appointed commanding officer of the company also served as military instructor at the O. S. and S. O. Home from January, 1926 until September 28, 1927, when he resigned to accept appointment as county road patrolman, succeeding Kenneth C. Barr, who had resigned the previous September 5.

While connected with the sheriff's office Cornwell became interested in identification work and established a criminal identification system in the office.

SALTIS AIDE SHOT TO DEATH

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Stephen Kuzynski, 25, known as "Bull Kane," reputed lieutenant of "Polack Joe" Saltis, southside beer baron, was murdered in a soft drink parlor today.

Kuzynski, police said, was killed by Eddie Back, recently arrested on a charge of bombing the garage of "Spike" O'Donnell, Saltis enemy.

The shooting occurred in a saloon operated by Rose Bodnor, who told police she did not report the shooting for two hours because she "was afraid I would get it."

WOMAN AND INFANT REMOVED TO PRISON

LORAIN, O., Jan. 31.—The law today stepped in where it had feared to tread for two weeks and sent Mrs. Julia Nazure, convicted liquor law violator, and her twelve day old baby daughter to the Marysville reformatory for women.

The stork held up the wheels of justice when the baby was born the day following Mrs. Nazure's conviction.

Mrs. Nazure's attorney sought a new trial but the court denied the motion. Ten days passed with the woman in a hospital and authorities undetermined as to what disposition to make of her case.

Physicians last night pronounced Mrs. Nazure in condition to be transferred and she and the baby were started for Marysville this morning.

Unity Committee Appointed; Plan Wins Favor

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 31.—Uniting of the 2,000,000 members of the Presbyterian Church, north, with the 4,000,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and possibly with other denominations, seemed a step nearer today.

Accredited clergymen delegates of the two churches met here and appointed two committees to devise methods of procedure and set further meeting dates in connection with the "unity" movement.

A report adopted by the delegates calls upon the newly formed committees, "to support so far as possible the effort for the organic union of all evangelic churches."

This declaration, it was emphasized, is virtually an invitation to other Christian denominations to become interested in the subject of unity. Dogmatic faith in the divinity of Christ is the sole requisite of a sect to participate.

One committee will seek a solution on administration and property rights, and the other will act on doctrine and policy. A Presbyterian, Rev. Dr. H. C. Swearingen, of St. Paul, is chairman of the former committee. A member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bishop William F. McDowell, Washington, D. C., is chairman of the second committee.

Rev. Dr. W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University, is a member of Dr. Swearingen's committee.

Dr. Eugene Antrim, of the Oklahoma City college, a Methodist Episcopal delegate, said considerable progress had been made toward uniting the two churches. There was virtually unanimity of opinion that the delegates had paved the way for eventual unity.

COMMITTEE FAVORS INSURANCE TAX CUT

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—The house committee on insurance today recommended passage of the bill by Senator George H. Bender, Cleveland, reducing the tax on premiums collected by foreign insurance companies in Ohio from 3 to 2 1-2 per cent. The bill has already been passed by the senate. Reductions embodied in the bill were urged by Governor Cooper in his legislative recommendations.

THOUSANDS HELP IN SEEKING GIRL LOST SINCE LAST SUNDAY

Blood-Stained Sack Strengthens Murder Theory

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 31.—The search for Edith May Dierdorf, 10, West Terre Haute news girl, believed to have been kidnaped and murdered drew 1,000 citizens to the countryside south of here today.

Two airplanes flew over the towns of Sullivan, Carlisle, and Paxton, while police and citizens continued a systematic search of abandoned mine shafts, creek banks and ditches.

Detectives examined the banks of Busseran Creek near the deep water hole under U. S. Highway No. 41 bridge, where Edith May's blood-stained paper sack was found.

Police held little hope that the girl would be found alive.

Edith May is one of nine children of Frederick W. Dierdorf, West Terre Haute mail carrier.

After attending the Lutheran Church Sunday morning, the girl and two sisters boarded a street car to take them to their home. As the car neared the business section of Terre Haute, Edith May separated from her sisters saying she had to get a paper from the newsstand for a "new customer."

She next appeared at a grocery, owned by Clarence Brothers, bought a package of chewing gum and rode away in an automobile with a man who had waited outside. Brothers identified pictures of the missing girl and said she told him she had a "new customer."

Sunday night, Hiram Smith, coal company official, notified police that one of his employes had seen an automobile stop on the Dixie Highway near Brossers Creek and had seen the driver throw something from the machine.

Several hours later Edith May's news bag was found beside a deep water hole under the Busserman Creek bridge. The bag contained three papers, and was marked by a blood clot, matted with hair. Police adopted the theory that the bag had been used to smother the girl's screams and that she had been struck on the head.

All highways were blocked by automobiles bearing the searching citizens. The searchers attended a mass meeting called by Mayors Samuel Tindall, West Terre Haute, and Ora D. Davis, Terre Haute, and promised to search the countryside until the girl was found.

WILBERFORCE WILL BENEFIT IN PROPOSED RE-APPROPRIATIONS

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—One appropriation bill carrying a total of $836,579.77, came before the senate for passage today and another carrying re-appropriations of $2,801,260.43, was to be introduced by Senator G. M. Kumler, chairman of the senate finance committee.

Two appropriation measures, carrying a total of $28,790,526, have already been passed by both the senate and house, to provide funds for current governmental expenses and construction of new highways.

The bill scheduled for passage today appropriates $800,000 to cover the 1928 deficit in the educational equalization, or "weak school district" fund, and $36,579.78 for the operation of the state library the last six months of 1927 and all of 1928. Governor Vic Donahey vetoed the 1927 library appropriation, but library employes remained on the job.

The "weak school district" and library appropriation bill was approved by the house late yesterday. Author of the bill is Rep. Charles H. Jones, of Jackson.

The bill to be introduced by Kumler re-appropriates funds voted for state institutions by the 1927 legislature but allowed to lapse by the Donahey administration.

Major items among the re-appropriations are $776,589.60 for the new institution for feeble-minded at Apple Creek; $341,726 for Hawthornden Farm, Cleveland; $664,797.20 for Longview Hospital, Cincinnati, including $298,256.95 for lands in Warren County, near Lebanon, for a farm in connection with the hospital and to be developed as site for a new institution; $146,937.33 for Cleveland State Hospital; $140,407.25 for Marysville Reformatory; $152,151.48 for Gallipolis Hospital; $136,215.21 for Columbus hospital for feeble-minded; $79,800 for Orient Feeble-Minded Hospital; $14,682.50 for the Girls Industrial School, Delaware; $7,500 for Toledo State Hospital; $184,964.80 for Kent State Normal School; and $11,761.45 for Wilberforce University.

Forty-six new bills were introduced in the house and senate yesterday.

GRISWOLD PREPARES REPORT FOLLOWING JETT DEATH PROBE

Lancaster School Inmates Quizzed By Welfare Chief

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—Back in his office today after investigating the death of Hamilton Jett, 17-year-old Marietta boy, at the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster on Jan. 9, State Welfare Director Hal H. Griswold said he would have a report on the case prepared in about a week.

The Lancaster inquiry supplemented an investigation conducted at Marietta at the behest of the boy's mother who claimed school guards beat and kicked him.

Double pneumonia was assigned as the cause of his death.

Griswold said he wanted all the notes of the two probes transcribed before he will fully consider the case. He was not prepared to say whether the school will be subjected to a general inquiry.

Boys at the school were called before Griswold in a closed session yesterday and Griswold later intimated the stories the boys told had little direct bearing on the Jett case.

Nine boys were summoned. Three of them were assigned to the discipline squad of which the Jett youth was a member.

The first actual story of the whipping of Jett was told by L. A. Miskill, school disciplinarian. He said he gave the boy ten strokes on Christmas Eve, for running away. He denied the blows drew blood.

Mrs. Jett was present at the hearing.

STRONG EVIDENCE

BATAVIA, O., Jan. 31.—"Leave those polecats outside; the evidence is strong enough."

Squire S. L. Larkin so requested Frank Slagg, game warden, when Slagg brought three youths before him today on charges of removing fur-bearing animals from their dens.

The three, Herman and Clyde Poe and Edgar Pewis, were fined $25 and costs.

The whole town knew about it.

YOUNG FLYER LANDS AFTER SETTING NEW ENDURANCE FIGURE

Miss Eleanor Smith, 17, Makes Solo Trip For Record

MITCHEL FIELD, L. I., Jan. 31.—Miss Eleanor Smith, 17, landed here at 3:33:55 a. m. today after achieving a new solo endurance flight record for women.

She had driven a Bird biplane thirteen hours, sixteen minutes and forty-five seconds or more than the required hour longer than the previous endurance record of Miss Bobby Trout of California.

Miss Trout's mark was twelve hours eleven minutes. In bettering it, Miss Smith also beat the continuous night flying record for women.

The plucky girl, who not long ago startled commerce department aviation officials by flying under East River bridges here, spent the hours since 2:17:10 p. m. yesterday cruising back and forth over Long island flying fields while her parents and fourteen-year-old brother kept watch below.

She had announced on starting that she hoped to remain in the air fifteen hours, despite a cold wind blowing across the island. Muffled in a heavy flying suit drawn over two leather jackets, she peered through a face mask as she drove her plane on 112 gallons of gasoline.

Just before nightfall she signaled "everything OK" to her father, Tom Smith, an actor, who went up and flew alongside her machine. On the sides of Smith's plane was painted in large letters the latest weather report.

At her own request the floodlights of the field were not turned on during the long hours of the night. Then, a few minutes before 3:30 a. m. she fired a red flare from a very signal gun, indicating she expected to land. Her plane swooped to an easy landing.

A sealed barograph of the National Aeronautical Association was carried by Miss Smith to make her record really official in case the flight body decides to recognize women's marks as separate from men.

SENATE MOVES FOR ELECTION REFORMS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—A definite move toward election reform was made by the senate committee on elections today as it was agreed that neither the Martin nor the Herbert election code bills would be acceptable in their present form.

The committee voted to make a sub-committee to report an amended or a substitute bill, using the Herbert Bills as a basis for further consideration and taking the best points of the two bills in an effort to secure an election code acceptable to both houses.

It was the sentiment of the committee that permanent registration was the most important matter to be considered and with that as the basic idea the two bills could be combined to present a complete codification of the election laws.

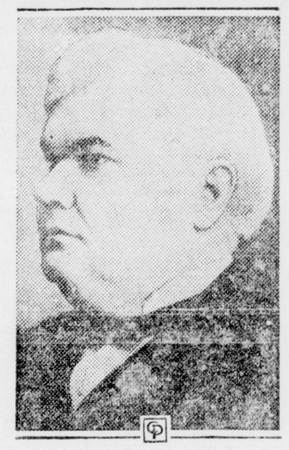
FUEL GAS FUMES CLAIM AGED WOMAN

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 31.—John Duraj, 72, was near death today from gas fumes which cost the life of his wife, Margrelan, 70, last night.

A neighbor woman who smelled gas, rushed to the Duraj rooms where she found Mrs. Duraj dead and her husband unconscious.

Gas was escaping from a range.

Trial Stirs State



Ohio politics have been stirred by the trial of Bert B. Buckley, state treasurer, at Columbus, O., charged with attempting to bribe John F. Eckhart, assistant prohibition administrator of the Columbus district. Buckley has denied that he offered Eckhart $800 a month to tip him off regarding raids planned against certain breweries.

HOOVER FISHING FOR FISH AND SOLUTION TO MANY PROBLEMS

Prohibition And Farm Relief Are Most Puzzling

LONG KEY, Fla., Jan. 31.—President-elect Hoover, wearing old clothes, a floppy hat and the eternal high stiff white collar, was fishing in the waters off here again today, the landing of a sailfish the immediate objective of his line.

But anyone who thinks the president-elect merely fishes on these expeditions is far from the truth.

Sailfish or no sailfish, Mr. Hoover will reel in his line before sundown on these southern waters and return to his temporary sea home on the luxurious yacht Sauntere, and there turn his attention to granting his inaugural address, completing details of his cabinet, threshing out policy matters.

He merely has transferred his office to a yacht which rides nicely in this balmy, tropical sea, away from politicians anxious for favors or bursting with advice. Many of those he leaves to Chairman Work of the Republican national committee, who receives daily at his hotel suite here.

But action will be required when he comes face to face with the ticklish problems of prohibition and farm relief confronting him as president.

He will appoint a commission to investigate prohibition and its enforcement, soon after he takes office. It is assumed the scope of the inquiry will be broad. He is expected to speak out in his inaugural address.

There is also the immediate problem of enforcement. Mr. Hoover will advance measures to tighten enforcement, and prohibition is likely to become, in his administration, the dominant domestic issue. It will not be settled overnight, the president-elect realizes.

The new administration is expected to slip for a time along the Coolidge groove. Mr. Hoover will do nothing radically different or extraordinary for the first few months, though after he becomes acclimated to his new office, he is expected to embark on a program distinctly his own, including some gradual changes in foreign policy.

Accompanying the president-elect on his second fishing expedition are Mrs. Hoover; Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone of the supreme court; former Governor James Goodrich of Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank and William Hamilton of New York; Verne Marshall, prominently identified with Cedar Rapids, Iowa, newspapers, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan.

The Hoovers are guests on the Milbank yacht, the Sauntere, while other members of the party are guests on the Amitie belonging to Joseph H. Adams. The party will return Saturday night.

AIRMAIL PILOT LEAPS SAFELY AFTER PLANE STRIKES STORM

MOLINE, Ills., Jan. 31.—In an open field fifteen miles south of Moline today was found the Travelair airplane from which Jack Story, airmail pilot, leaped for his life last night near Davenport, Ia. The plane had made an almost perfect landing after flying nearly twenty miles without its pilot. All of the mail was intact.

Story was forced to abandon his plane when he ran into a blizzard and snow storm near Davenport. He had exhausted his gasoline supply and was at an altitude of 3,000 feet when he leaped out, pulled the rip-cord of his parachute and floated down through the storm to a landing field on the outskirts of the city.

Before leaping Story turned off the ignition and set the stabilizer on his plane in the hope that it would come down without catching fire and destroying the cargo of mail he was carrying from Kansas City to Chicago.

CONFESSED BRIBER CROSS-EXAMINED; CHECK PHONE CALLS

Government Case Is Near End; To Call Brewmaster

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—Cross examination of John L. Schrimper, Cincinnati attorney, was begun in federal court today with the resumption of the bribery trial of State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley.

Schrimper, along with Joseph Sperber, Cincinnati brewmaster, was indicted with Buckley on charges of conspiracy to bribe a federal prohibition officer and conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition law.

The three, the government claims, attempted to "fix" a federal prohibition officer so that Cincinnati breweries could manufacture beer of more than the legal alcoholic content.

Schrimper and Sperber pleaded guilty when arraigned. Both are government witnesses.

Schrimper first took the witness stand late yesterday.

His testimony was similar to that of Adolph Gruber, Cincinnati attorney associated with Schrimper, who was named as a conspirator by the federal grand jury but not indicted. Gruber testified earlier yesterday.

Sperber is expected to follow Schrimper on the witness stand, and the government expects to have its case practically completed with his testimony.

Following Gruber on the stand, and prior to Schrimper's testimony, Clarence E. Baxter, manager of the Neil House, Columbus hotel, was returned to the stand. He introduced hotel records showing occasions when Buckley was registered there, and that Buckley put through long distance calls from his room to Cincinnati.

William F. McClure, an employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co., produced long distance toll tickets of calls from Buckley to Gruber and Schrimper in Cincinnati. Frank Wesley, commercial manager of the telephone company in Columbus, also testified to such matters.

Leslie O. Jones, federal prohibition department employe, told of his hearing the case of the Jackson Brewing Company and his report to Woodruff which resulted in the brewery license being revoked.

Jones said the hearing was Nov. 9 but he did not submit his report to Woodruff until Dec. 5.

Jones denied to Attorney Robert Brumbaugh the report was held up for about a month for any particular reason.

BRENNAN TESTIFIES

W. F. Brennan, Dayton, federal prohibition inspector and former Xenian, testified for the government in the trial of State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley for bribery in federal court at Columbus.

Brennan, who is a former Xenia mayor, told of making an inspection of the Jackson Brewing Co., last October 5, taking four samples of beer and finding by a personally conducted test that one of the samples contained 4.41 per cent alcohol.

Brennan said the other three samples were brought to a Columbus chemist, but that he understood they tested more than 1-2 per cent.

PRINCE PAYS TRIBUTE TO MINING PEOPLE

DURHAM, England, Jan. 31.—The Prince of Wales paid heartfelt tribute today to the courage of the poverty-stricken people in the mining districts of North England, and expressed confidence that the distressing conditions he has witnessed will be remedied.

Nearing the end of his tour through Durham and Northumberland Counties, where he obtained an intimate understanding of the suffering and want of the people, the prince made the following statement to W. W. Wilkinson, Mayor of Durham.

"I have been deeply touched by what I have seen of the bravery, patience and hope of these people. It is very difficult to know what to do to solve the problem. I am sure, however, that things will be righted, but I am afraid it must take time.

"The people I have met could not have been nicer to me personally. It was wonderful"

The prince was greeted by cheering crowds when he arrived at this ancient cathedral town, surmounted by the castle built by William the Conqueror, and its cathedral, nearly a thousand years old.

Before coming here the prince visited miners' cottages in several neighboring villages and continued his study of conditions among them.

JOHNSTON'S FAMILY STANDS BY

When Henry S. Johnston first became governor of Oklahoma, his wife began the custom of greeting him at the door of the executive mansion, with her family gathered about her, as he returned from the state house each night, and she has not abandoned her practice now that he has been suspended from office pending his impeachment trial. WILBERFORCE WILL BENEFIT IN PROPOSED RE-APPROPRIATIONS

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—One appropriation bill carrying a total of $836,579.77, came before the senate for passage today and another carrying re-appropriations of $2,801,260.43, was to be introduced by Senator G. M. Kumler, chairman of the senate finance committee.

Two appropriation measures, carrying a total of $28,790,526, have already been passed by both the senate and house, to provide funds for current governmental expenses and construction of new highways.

The bill scheduled for passage today appropriates $800,000 to cover the 1928 deficit in the educational equalization, or "weak school district" fund, and $36,579.78 for the operation of the state library the last six months of 1927 and all of 1928. Governor Vic Donahey vetoed the 1927 library appropriation, but library employes remained on the job.

The "weak school district" and library appropriation bill was approved by the house late yesterday. Author of the bill is Rep. Charles H. Jones, of Jackson.

The bill to be introduced by Kumler re-appropriates funds voted for state institutions by the 1927 legislature but allowed to lapse by the Donahey administration.

Major items among the re-appropriations are $776,589.60 for the new institution for feeble-minded at Apple Creek; $341,726 for Hawthornden Farm, Cleveland; $664,797.20 for Longview Hospital, Cincinnati, including $298,256.95 for lands in Warren County, near Lebanon, for a farm in connection with the hospital and to be developed as site for a new institution; $146,937.33 for Cleveland State Hospital; $140,407.25 for Marysville Reformatory; $152,151.48 for Gallipolis Hospital; $136,215.21 for Columbus hospital for feeble-minded; $79,800 for Orient Feeble-Minded Hospital; $14,682.50 for the Girls Industrial School, Delaware; $7,500 for Toledo State Hospital; $184,964.80 for Kent State Normal School; and $11,761.45 for Wilberforce University.

Forty-six new bills were introduced in the house and senate yesterday.

GRISWOLD PREPARES REPORT FOLLOWING JETT DEATH PROBE

Lancaster School Inmates Quizzed By Welfare Chief

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—Back in his office today after investigating the death of Hamilton Jett, 17-year-old Marietta boy, at the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster on Jan. 9, State Welfare Director Hal H. Griswold said he would have a report on the case prepared in about a week.

The Lancaster inquiry supplemented an investigation conducted at Marietta at the behest of the boy's mother who claimed school guards beat and kicked him.

Double pneumonia was assigned as the cause of his death.

Griswold said he wanted all the notes of the two probes transcribed before he will fully consider the case. He was not prepared to say whether the school will be subjected to a general inquiry.

Boys at the school were called before Griswold in a closed session yesterday and Griswold later intimated the stories the boys told had little direct bearing on the Jett case.

Nine boys were summoned. Three of them were assigned to the discipline squad of which the Jett youth was a member.

The first actual story of the whipping of Jett was told by L. A. Miskill, school disciplinarian. He said he gave the boy ten strokes on Christmas Eve, for running away. He denied the blows drew blood.

Mrs. Jett was present at the hearing.

STRONG EVIDENCE

BATAVIA, O., Jan. 31.—"Leave those polecats outside; the evidence is strong enough."

Squire S. L. Larkin so requested Frank Slagg, game warden, when Slagg brought three youths before him today on charges of removing furbearing animals from their dens.

The three, Herman and Clyde Poe and Edgar Pewis, were fined $25 and costs.

The whole town knew about it.

PRINCE PAYS TRIBUTE TO MINING PEOPLE

DURHAM, England, Jan. 31.—The Prince of Wales paid heartfelt tribute today to the courage of the poverty-stricken people in the mining districts of North England, and expressed confidence that the distressing conditions he has witnessed will be remedied.

Nearing the end of his tour through Durham and Northumberland Counties, where he obtained an intimate understanding of the suffering and want of the people, the prince made the following statement to W. W. Wilkinson, Mayor of Durham.

"I have been deeply touched by what I have seen of the bravery, patience and hope of these people. It is very difficult to know what to do to solve the problem. I am sure, however, that things will be righted, but I am afraid it must take time.

"The people I have met could not have been nicer to me personally. It was wonderful"

The prince was greeted by cheering crowds when he arrived at this ancient cathedral town, surmounted by the castle built by William the Conqueror, and its cathedral, nearly a thousand years old.

Before coming here the prince visited miners' cottages in several neighboring villages and continued his study of conditions among them.

YOUNG FLYER LANDS AFTER SETTING NEW ENDURANCE FIGURE

Miss Eleanor Smith, 17, Makes Solo Trip For Record

MITCHEL FIELD, L. I., Jan. 31.—Miss Eleanor Smith, 17, landed here at 3:33:55 a. m. today after achieving a new solo endurance flight record for women.

She had driven a Bird biplane thirteen hours, sixteen minutes and forty-five seconds or more than the required hour longer than the previous endurance record of Miss Bobby Trout of California.

Miss Trout's mark was twelve hours eleven minutes. In bettering it, Miss Smith also beat the continuous night flying record for women.

The plucky girl, who not long ago startled commerce department aviation officials by flying under East River bridges here, spent the hours since 2:17:10 p. m. yesterday cruising back and forth over Long Island flying fields while her parents and fourteen-year-old brother kept watch below.

She had announced on starting that she hoped to remain in the air fifteen hours, despite a cold wind blowing across the island. Muffled in a heavy flying suit drawn over two leather jackets, she peered through a face mask as she drove her plane on 112 gallons of gasoline.

Just before nightfall she signaled "everything OK" to her father, Tom Smith, an actor, who went up and flew alongside her machine. On the sides of Smith's plane was painted in large letters the latest weather report.

At her own request the floodlights of the field were not turned on during the long hours of the night. Then, a few minutes before 3:30 a. m. she fired a red flare from a very signal gun, indicating she expected to land. Her plane swooped to an easy landing.

A sealed barograph of the National Aeronautical Association was carried by Miss Smith to make her record really official in case the flight body decides to recognize women's marks as separate from men.

SENATE MOVES FOR ELECTION REFORMS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—A definite move toward election reform was made by the senate committee on elections today as it was agreed that neither the Martin nor the Herbert election code bills would be acceptable in their present form.

The committee voted to make a sub-committee to report an amended or a substitute bill, using the Herbert Bills as a basis for further consideration and taking the best points of the two bills in an effort to secure an election code acceptable to both houses.

It was the sentiment of the committee that permanent registration was the most important matter to be considered and with that as the basic idea the two bills could be combined to present a complete codification of the election laws.

FUEL GAS FUMES CLAIM AGED WOMAN

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 31.—John Duraj, 72, was near death today from gas fumes which cost the life of his wife, Margrelan, 70, last night.

A neighbor woman who smelled gas, rushed to the Duraj rooms where she found Mrs. Duraj dead and her husband unconscious.

Gas was escaping from a range.

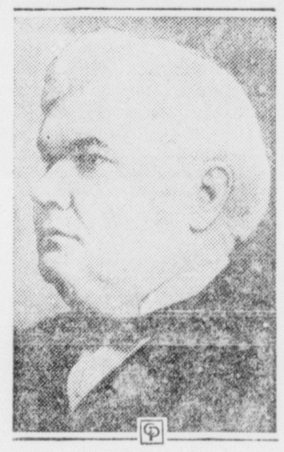
AIRMAIL PILOT LEAPS SAFELY AFTER PLANE STRIKES STORM

MOLINE, Ills., Jan. 31.—In an open field fifteen miles south of Moline today was found the Travelair airplane from which Jack Story, airmail pilot, leaped for his life last night near Davenport, Ia. The plane had made an almost perfect landing after flying nearly twenty miles without its pilot. All of the mail was intact.

Story was forced to abandon his plane when he ran into a blizzard and snow storm near Davenport. He had exhausted his gasoline supply and was at an altitude of 3,000 feet when he leaped out, pulled the rip-cord of his parachute and floated down through the storm to a landing field on the outskirts of the city.

Before leaping Story turned off the ignition and set the stabilizer on his plane in the hope that it would come down without catching fire and destroying the cargo of mail he was carrying from Kansas City to Chicago.

Trial Stirs State



Ohio politics have been stirred by the trial of Bert B. Buckley, state treasurer, at Columbus, O., charged with attempting to bribe John F. Eckhart, assistant prohibition administrator of the Columbus district. Buckley has denied that he offered Eckhart $300 a month to tip him off regarding raids planned against certain breweries.

HOOVER FISHING FOR FISH AND SOLUTION TO MANY PROBLEMS

Prohibition And Farm Relief Are Most Puzzling

LONG KEY, Fla., Jan. 31.—President-elect Hoover, wearing old clothes, a floppy hat and the eternal high stiff white collar, was fishing in the waters off here again today, the landing of a sailfish the immediate objective of his line.

But anyone who thinks the president-elect merely fishes on these expectations is far from the truth.

Sailfish or no sailfish, Mr. Hoover will reel in his line before sundown on these southern waters and return to his temporary sea home on the luxurious yacht Sauntere, and there turn his attention to drafting his inaugural address, completing details of his cabinet, and tossing out policy matters.

He merely has transferred his office to a yacht which rides nicely in this balmy, tropical sea, away from politicians anxious for favors or bursting with advice. Many of those he leaves to Chairman Work of the Republican national committee, who receives daily at his hotel suite here.

But action will be required when he comes face to face with the ticklish problems of prohibition and farm relief confronting him as president.

He will appoint a commission to investigate prohibition and its enforcement, soon after he takes office. It is assumed the scope of the inquiry will be broad. He is expected to speak out in his inaugural address.

There is also the immediate problem of enforcement. Mr. Hoover will advance measures to tighten enforcement, and prohibition is likely to become, in his administration, the dominant domestic issue. It will not be settled overnight, the president-elect realizes.

The new administration is expected to slip for a time along the Coolidge groove. Mr. Hoover will do nothing radically different or extraordinary for the first few months, though after he becomes acclimated to his new office, he is expected to embark on a program distinctly his own, including some gradual changes in foreign policy.

Accompanying the president-elect on his second fishing expedition are Mrs. Hoover; Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone of the supreme court; former Governor James Goodrich of Indiana; Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank and William Hamilton of New York; Verne Marshall, prominently identified with Cedar Rapids, Iowa, newspapers, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan.

The Hoovers are guests on the Milbank yacht, the Sauntere, while other members of the party are guests on the Amitie belonging to Joseph H. Adams. The party will return Saturday night.

CONFESSED BRIBER CROSS-EXAMINED; CHECK PHONE CALLS

Government Case Is Near End; To Call Brewmaster

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—Cross examination of John L. Schrimper, Cincinnati attorney, was begun in federal court today with the resumption of the bribery trial of State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley.

Schrimper, along with Joseph Sperber, Cincinnati brewmaster, was indicted with Buckley on charges of conspiracy to bribe a federal prohibition officer and conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition law.

The three, the government claims, attempted to "fix" a federal prohibition officer so that Cincinnati breweries could manufacture beer of more than the legal alcoholic content.

Schrimper and Sperber pleaded guilty when arraigned. Both are government witnesses.

Schrimper first took the witness stand late yesterday.

His testimony was similar to that of Adolph Gruber, Cincinnati attorney associated with Schrimper, who was named as a conspirator by the federal grand jury but not indicted. Gruber testified earlier yesterday.

Sperber is expected to follow Schrimper on the witness stand, and the government expects to have its case practically completed with his testimony.

Following Gruber on the stand, and prior to Schrimper's testimony, Clarence E. Baxter, manager of the Neil House, Columbus hotel, was returned to the stand. He introduced hotel records showing occasions when Buckley was registered there, and that Buckley put through long distance calls from his room to Cincinnati.

William F. McClure, an employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co., produced long distance toll tickets of calls from Buckley to Gruber and Schrimper in Cincinnati. Frank Wesley, commercial manager of the telephone company in Columbus, also testified to such matters.

Leslie O. Jones, federal prohibition department employe, told of his hearing the case of the Jackson Brewing Company and his report to Woodruff which resulted in the brewery license being revoked.

Jones said the hearing was Nov. 9 but he did not submit his report to Woodruff until Dec. 5.

Jones denied to Attorney Robert Brumbaugh the report was held up for about a month for any particular reason.

BRENNAN TESTIFIES

W. F. Brennan, Dayton, federal prohibition inspector and former Xenian, testified for the government in the trial of State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley for bribery in federal court at Columbus.

Brennan, who is a former Xenia mayor, told of making an inspection of the Jackson Brewing Co., last October 5, taking four samples of beer and finding by a personally conducted test that one of the samples contained 4.41 per cent alcohol.

Brennan said the other three samples were brought to a Columbus chemist, but that he understood they tested more than 1-2 per cent.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Anna Jane Steiner, and the late John A. Steiner. Rice is vice president of the Dayton Savings and Trust Company. They left on a month's wedding trip through the West Indies, aboard the S. S. Columbus. They will make their home in Dayton.

Colonel Paz, Lieut. Col. Brito and Commandante Cejador received the death sentences. The court's decision will be submitted to the Spanish cabinet tomorrow.

EDITION EXPLOITS AUTO AND ALLIED LINES

MOTORS, TIRES, ACCESSORIES, RADIOS AND INSURANCE SHOWN

Advertising Symposium Catalogues Retail Lines As Nature Prepares To Offer Pleasure Advantges; Many Dealers Taking Part.

This edition of THE GAZETTE is dedicated to the automobile, auto accessory, tire, auto insurance and radio retailing interests of Xenia.

Advertisements of merchants engaged in these lines of endeavor, are published in today's issue and will serve readers as a catalogue of these lines of retailing in Xenia.

This is a particularly appropriate time to exploit the auto and its allied lines, and other forms of diversion. While snow sweeps Xenia streets and chill blasts harass pedestrians, there is the promise of spring in the lengthening days and the fact that Groundhog Day is almost upon us.

During these January days the strengthening evening daylight, has spurred the promise of Spring. One day citizens walked to their homes in the evening in the glow of street lights and the next daylight still prevailed. Thus nature works its miracle and stirs mankind with the promise of Ohio's pleasant summers.

With the lengthening days and this first gentle hint of Spring comes the promise of the open road, the nature-glorified countryside, the rides to pleasure resorts, the cool picnic spots beside obscure streams and hundreds of other advantages that the automobile and the summer time connive to bring to pleasure-seeking humans.

It is also particularly advantageous for auto dealers and their allied industries to exploit their wares at this time because it follows on the heels of the big automobile shows, where the newest and smartest in motor equippage has just been seen and praised. New models prepared in time for the shows, are now being exhibited by dealers in their particular lines.

Bryant Motor Sales Co., Market and Green Sts, is proud of its new Ford models. The company recalls the long wait of recent memory before the first new models were produced, but is satisfied that the result was well worth the handicaps undergone. The new Ford can now lift up its head with the best and quite frequently shows its heels in similar manner.

The ever-dependable Dodge, always a popular popular-priced car, is gaining new ascendancy here through its distribution by Creamer and Binder, N. Whiteman St., who are said to be finding a hearty reception for the new models they are showing. Johnston Motor Sales Co., W. Main St., is proud of its new line, which it believes fits the pocketbooks of all classes and still gives them smart auto advantages. This company is showing the Durant and the DeSoto, the latter a new car that has been received happily here as well as elsewhere.

The Babb Hardware Store, S. Detroit St., is also pleased with its Graham-Paige models, bearing as they do, the guarantee of increasing satisfaction that is insured by the integrity of those colorful figures of the industrial world, the three Graham Brothers. When they acquired Paige the motor world knew what to expect and they have not only established that company soundly but are showing an attractive car that is priced right and is fast gaining popularity.

The Greene County Hardware Co., E. Main St., has a right to feel that it can satisfy the auto needs of Greene Countians with the immense and elaborate line of cars handled. This feeling is based on the fact that this company has the Whippet, Willys, Studebaker and Erskine. Willys produced a car that rides with any of the cheaper models in the Whippet and then makes a finer car for fatter pocketbooks. Studebaker produces the ever dependable car of that name and then also caters to those who do not want to pay so much, by producing a popular little brother called the Erskine.

Purdom and McFarland Main and Whiteman Sts., have apparently found easy sailing here under the banner of the General Motors products, the Oakland and Pontiac. So rapidly have these cars won their way into the affections of Greene Countians that the Xenia agency and its branch have been more than satisfied with the reception given these two fine cars. New models are offering something new in fine motor-car construction also.

Lang Chevrolet Co., the big agency on E. Main St., is anticipating its greatest year with the popular Chevrolet. Large and beautiful show rooms, a big garage and a large staff of salesmen have made this company well-known and trusted and the Chevrolet auto has done the rest. The interesting development of this car has added to its popularity and the Xenia agency finds the reception given it here, assurance that it will again be among the leaders.

McCoy Brothers Motor Sales, W. Main St., are anticipating a big demand for Auburn Motor Car. This car has never been sold in Xenia although it is one of the popular six and eight cylinder makes. These cars can be seen on display in their show window.

Cowden and Fudge, S. Detroit St., dealers for the famous Nash "400" have several models of this car on display. The Nash "400" is a new departure in the automobile interests.

Bales Motor Sales, S. Detroit St., is anticipating a warm reception for another General Motors product, the popular and long-lived Oldsmobile, which it is showing in new models. This company also handles the Philco Radio, a popular receiving set. Hagler Radio Shop, Gazette Bldg., has been building a big business with the Zenith and A. C. Dayton Radios while Brown Furniture Co., Green St., has been enjoying an equal popularity through the popular Steinite Radio.

In the auto accessory lines, tire dealers taking part in this advertising symposium, offer almost every well-known make. Xenia Mercantile Co., is presenting the Giant; Xenia Auto Necessity Co. is showing Dayton Thorobred The Carroll-Binder Co., is exploiting the Goodyear; the Xenia Vulcanizing Co., is showing the General Cord and Famous Auto Supply has the Diamond. Fred F. Graham is exploiting his automobile glass department.

Insurance men are offering more popular rates for auto protection and those listed in this edition are: Ray Cox, S. B. LeSourd Co., D. E. Anderson Insurance Co., and Otto Hornick.

The Anderson Rent-A-Car Co., S. Whiteman St., agent for Goodrich Silvertown Cord tires and rent a car, has installed a new Hydraulic Jack to facilitate the pressure alemiteing of automobiles.

The Swigart Bros. Garage, E. Second St., gives day and night service that means everything to stranded motorists these snowy winter days. Their body and fender work is also unsurpassed.

Get Your Vegetables in Liquid Form!

DOUBTLESS you know there are valuable dietary qualities in vegetables, but not all of us get enough fresh vegetables, and one soon tires of a "vegetable diet." A very easy way to remedy this is to get a little syrup pepsin. Take a spoonful occasionally and you stimulate the inner system. Your keener appetite, and perfect assimilation of whatever you eat will soon show you are on the right track! Your elimination will become more thorough and regular.

It isn't necessary to give up things you like to eat; or eat a lot of other things because you "ought to." The syrup pepsin can establish that perfect balance without dieting. And how pure syrup pepsin tones the stomach, liver, and bowels! You'll soon discover you can eat anything. Your chronic recurring constipation spells will disappear. Anybody who will take this simple precaution will go month after month without need of the powerful purges so frequently needed in the past.

Make a test of this wonderful vegetable product. Dr. Caldwell first used it in 1875. Today, you cannot name a druggist who hasn't this famous prescription always on hand, all put up, directions enclosed. Nothing is so wonderful for children, too; it is an ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin that just about insures the health of young or old.

Get Your Vegetables in Liquid Form!

DOUBTLESS you know there are valuable dietary qualities in vegetables, but not all of us get enough fresh vegetables, and one soon tires of a "vegetable diet." A very easy way to remedy this is to get a little syrup pepsin. Take a spoonful occasionally and you stimulate the inner system. Your keener appetite, and perfect assimilation of whatever you eat will soon show you are on the right track! Your elimination will become more thorough and regular.

It isn't necessary to give up things you like to eat; or eat a lot of other things because you "ought to." The syrup pepsin can establish that perfect balance without dieting. And how pure syrup pepsin tones the stomach, liver, and bowels! You'll soon discover you can eat anything. Your chronic recurring constipation spells will disappear. Anybody who will take this simple precaution will go month after month without need of the powerful purges so frequently needed in the past.

Make a test of this wonderful vegetable product. Dr. Caldwell first used it in 1875. Today, you cannot name a druggist who hasn't this famous prescription always on hand, all put up, directions enclosed. Nothing is so wonderful for children, too; it is an ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin that just about insures the health of young or old.

THAT LAKES-TO-ATLANTIC CANAL

An all water route to the Atlantic for the mid-western grain producers has been long discussed. The project of the St. Lawrence canal has received favorable comment. Farmers are dubious about the advisability of pushing the development owing to the change in the wheat belt which is slowly going westward.

E. G. Nourse of the Institute of Economics takes exception to the views of ex-Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa who declared recently in favor of the St. Lawrence ship canal. Mr. Nourse looks at the situation through the experienced eyes of one who has studied the plan for over five years. Aside from showing that Mr. Harding is too optimistic with his figures the current writer views the trend of the entire grain industry to determine what will be its condition in 1945.

Inasmuch as the proposed canal is intended to cut down freight costs on produce from the mid-western farm lands a shift of the grain fields west would eliminate the need of such relief says this writer. "Since the war, the importance of the United States as an exporter of wheat has fallen off very sharply. Apparently the coming of tractors and the combine harvester have no checked this decline, but only with a considerable shift in the wheat belt. It is now necessary to go to the second tier of states west of the Mississippi river before one gets to an important export wheat region, and the recent growth has been chiefly in Kansas and adjoining states of the south west. This area is able to survive in the export market because of its very low costs of production and its easy accessibility to Gulf ports.

It must be remembered, Mr. Nourse says, that it will take at least a dozen years to build the canal and there is no possibility that work could actually be started before 1930 even if government authorization were secured with the utmost promptness. And what is likely to happen in our wheat industry between now and 1942 or 1945?

This is a vast problem that must be worked out by engineers in co-operation with the country's greatest business leaders and will be watched with great interest. The fact that the proposed canal costing so many millions would be closed to commerce by ice at least half of each year is an important factor to be taken into consideration.

INVITATION TO CROOKS

Chicago's appeal to other cities to keep their crooks at home is understandable. Chicago already has all the crooks it needs; and it can see no reason why it should suffer from the depredations of others wished on it. A good neighbor does not throw his garbage onto someone else's land. That is Chicago's viewpoint.

Other cities may retort that they have suffered as much from Chicago-bred crooks, as Chicago has from theirs. They can also point out that the Windy City is crook-infested because it attracts crooks, as it does more desirable tourists. Crooks flock together, as do other birds of a feather. Crime likes company as surely as misery does. They find both in Chicago. Criminals take to big cities because there hiding is easy and the pickings good; and for years Chicago has tolerated an alliance between crime and politics that has made it safe for crooks. They will continue to flock to this el dorado, whatever other cities may do to keep their native talent at home, as long as this condition exists.

Chicago cannot expect other cities to protect it by making themselves equally attractive to vice and crime. The quickest and surest way for any city to rid itself of criminals and deter others from coming to it is to make its climate unhealthy for law breakers. This, at last, Chicago appears to be making a serious effort to accomplish.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK. — Walter Gifford, the president of the American Tel and Tel, will tell you that it really happened to him. He came across an amusing cartoon in Punch, the British humor magazine, which dealt with phone service. It pleased President Gifford so much he decided to ask the magazine's permission to reprint it in newspaper advertisements in America.

So he telephoned to Punch, in London, from his New York office: "This is President Gifford of the American Tel and Tel, in New York," he said affably. "That cartoon was very funny, and I do wish you would let me republish it here. What is the cartoonist's name?"

"You got the wrong department!" growled the voice, 3,000 miles away, as it hung up.

NEWSPAPERMAN STUFF

Park Rowgues were chinning about good newspapermen and one of them recalled Gene Fowler's clever ruse to get a yarn concerning the last illness of the elder J. P. Morgan.

It was winter, and, with all the other scoopee makers, Fowler patiently waited in the snow in front of the man's house. They hoped for bulletins from the doctors on the condition of the distinguished patient, for his death would mean terrible depression on the stock market. But the physicians decided not to give out any anouncements.

Finally, Fowler hit upon a plan. When he saw Dr. Walters leave the house, he donned specs and a beard and procured a doctor's satchel. Then he rang the doorbell, and asked for Dr. Walters. He was told Dr. Walters had just departed.

"I am Dr. Fowler," said Gene. "He urged me to join the consultation."

Fowler was admitted, and, once inside, the other doctors told "Doctor Fowler" that he could be of no assistance, as Morgan's passing would only be a matter of hours.

"Very well, gentlemen," said Fowler solemnly, as he hastened away to break one of the most important scoops of the last decade.

The Way of the World

Athletics

The football season has been over for some months, save for the big California game. Baseball will be under way for a new season soon. Looking back over one season of major athletics and contemplating another, one wonders whether the American people aren't a little off balance, a little warped and cramped as to perspective in the matter of athletics. It would seem to be pretty hard for any normal boy to go through high school and not come naturally to believe that studies and scholarship are matters of incidental interest to be found entirely on the edges of the great central interest in athletics. The big things in the high school lad's mind are the football season, the football team, the football record.

This attitude is by not means wholly the fault of the boy. Teachers think and talk too much about sports. Parents think and talk too much about sports. Everybody knows there should be enough exercise to keep the body in good order. Everybody believes in whetting the spirit and the mind by means of contest, but to make athletics first is to miss the main point of education and character building.

Speaking Efficiently

A successful teacher of public speaking once handed the writer these rules for speaking in public. There are too many of them, but at least they are brief. They are sound rules and are worth your looking over. 1—Speak when you have something to say. 2—Speak what you believe to be true. 3—Prepare thoroughly. 4—Be clear—what CAN be misunderstood WILL be misunderstood. 5—Stick to your subject. 6—Be fair—never misrepresent; never misinterpret. 7—Be brief—recognize terminal facilities. 8—Speak naturally. 9—Be serene — never pompous. 10.—Enunciate clearly. 11 — Suppress craving for applause. 12—Stop when through. 13—Aim for earnestness, intensity, sincerity.

Too Much Attention

To enjoy the climate where you are, think and talk less about the weather—if it is bad. To enjoy good health, think and talk less about your ailments—if any.

Forget yourself into a good day.

EUROPE DECLARED INTERESTED IN CALENDAR REVISION

By WILLIAM H. BOOTH

Former President International Chamber of Commerce.

(Willis H. Booth was born at Winnemucca, Nev., Feb. 15, 1874. He attended the University of California for four years. He was formerly treasurer of L. Booth and Sons, machinery manufacturers, and vice president of an electric heating company in Los Angeles. He is now chairman of the board of the Edison Electric Appliance company and vice president of the Security Trust and Savings bank, Los Angeles, and the Guaranty Chamber Trust company of New York. An ex-president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Pacific coast, he was vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and president of the International Chamber of Commerce. His office is in New York City.)

An international conference to consider calendar reform would awaken all the world to the need for a sensible system of reckoning time and might give rise to the formulation of a better calendar system than has yet been proposed.

The International Chamber of Commerce has requested the League of Nations to take action contemplating calendar reform and I happen to be a member of the League special committee of inquiry on the reform of the calendar.

The present calendar is a make-shift that was designed before commercial statistics were of importance. All business now bases future activities on its past history.

In England, France, Poland, Sweden, and Italy, is manifested intense interest in favor of an international conference on calendar simplification. I am assured of this in correspondence that I have carried on with people in those countries.

The calendar cannot be reformed by bringing pressure to bear, but only through education. An international conference would bring the necessity for a simplified calendar to the attention of the whole world.

A better plan might be devised by having a conference. If you go to an international conference with a fixed plan, you engender an automatic opposition.

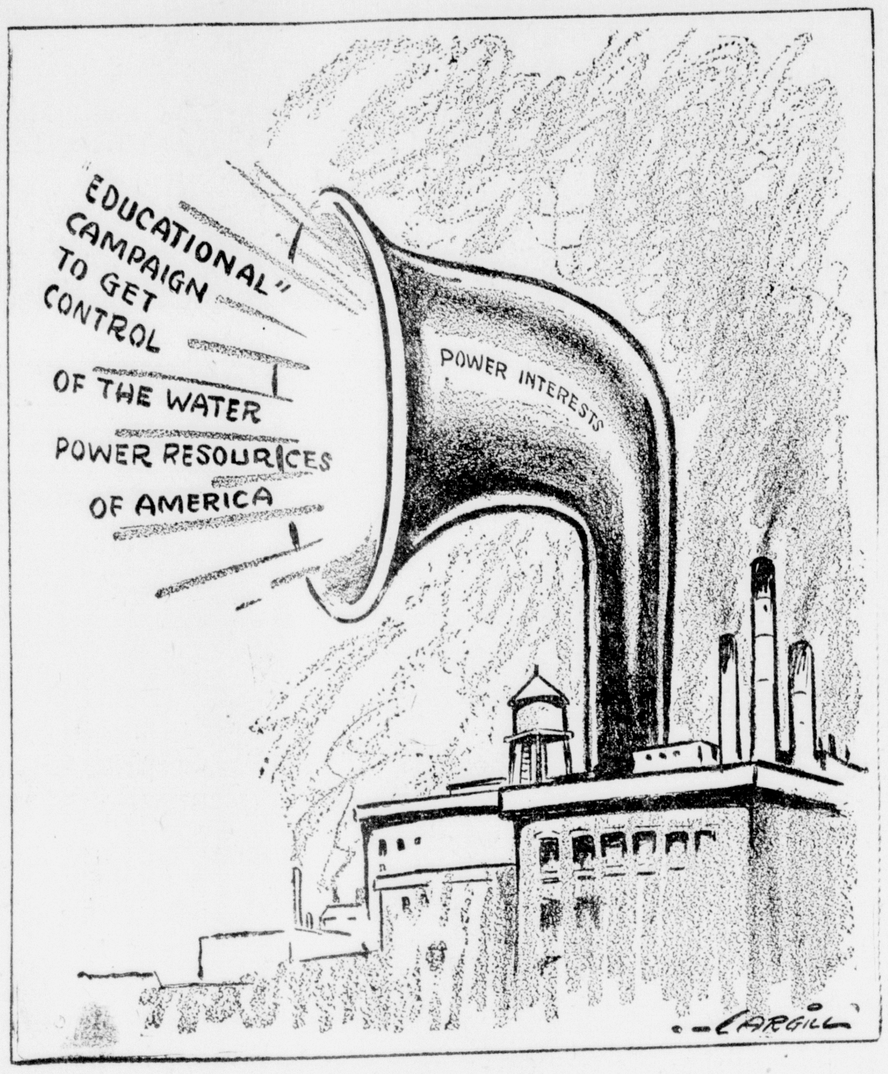
HORN OF "PLENTY"



How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

There is probably no area that is so underdeveloped or else so overdeveloped as the neck and shoulders. For some reason, the average woman forgets that it is quite necessary for her to concentrate exercises on this part of her anatomy, and as a result, all too often scrawny neck and round shoulders result.

A perfectly developed neck is one of the charms which every woman should strive for. A thin neck is not only unbeautiful, but it seems to suggest a general lack of good health that is so important. The exercises that I am suggesting are simple, but they are, nevertheless, very effective. Mind you, I do not desire to suggest anything that will overdevelop the neck or shoulders, for the suggestion of power which comes from overdeveloped muscles is not attractive in a woman. In fact, it is grace and symmetry of line which we hope to gain.

One of the first things that I am going to suggest to you is not only a beauty measure, but a comfort one. Frequently the muscles in the back of the neck become tensed, and headaches and other general forms of illness result. To relieve this tension try dropping your head back just as far as it can go without straining the throat, and permit your mouth to drop open naturally. It is not by any means the most attractive exercise in the world, but I assure you its results are quick and most effective.

Rotating the shoulder blades is a very good exercise for reducing. From a position with the shoulers stretched back, raise them as far upwards as possible and then complete a rotary movement, bring them down in the front, pressing as far down as possible. Repeat this exercise until your muscles are thoroughly tired. It is excellent to fill in the hollows around your neck and to reduce excess fat upon the shoulder blades.

An exercise for the neck is as follows: Turn or twist the head far to one side, looking over the shoulder, until you feel the strain in the side muscles of your neck. Turn the neck far to the other side and stretch. Repeat until tired. Now bring the head as far back as you can looking straight upward. Stretch the throat muscles. Bring the head forward until the chin rests upon the chest and stretch the back of your neck.

Tensing and relaxing the muscles of arm, hand and shoulder is beneficial. To do this, stretch the arm far to the side. Imagine to yourself that you must reach a point two or three inches distant. Stretch the muscles without stirring from the original posture. Keep your shoulders still; relax. Do this until your arm is tired.

Here is another effective exercise for the neck. Lie on a bed and with the head extending over the edge, let the head hang as far dawn as possible. Bring it upward and fordward until the chin touches the chest. Repeat until tired.

If any of these exercises trouble you through inducing a slight dizziness, you may still continue with them, though not too strenuously, for the condition shows that you urgently need them. But do them only a few times in the beginning, until your muscles are stronger.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—One of our leading associations engaged in the dissemination of Washington news takes great credit to itself for discovering how the secret voted recently, in secret session, on the confirmation of President Coolidge's appointment of Roy O. West to his cabinet, as secretary of the interior.

Tush! Every newspaper man in the capital knows, to the last detail, what happens at all the senate's secret sessions.

He knows rather more about the secret sessions than he does about the open ones, because he makes it especially his business to find out. Occasionally a correspondent is accidentally absent from the press gallery during an open session and misses something interesting, but he never neglects to investigate thoroughly when the door is kept shut in his face.

However, ordinarily, it is not considered etiquette for our correspondent to broadcast these secret votes. A little make-believe guessing, as to a few senators, is permissible—but not the revelation of every darned senator's vote, showing that really there is no more secrecy about an executive session of the senate than there is about a radio announcement.

The reason for this bluffing is obvious enough.

All present at one of these secret sessions are sworn to keep the whole thing mum. Publication of virtually a stenographic report quite strongly suggests that somebody must have fractured a more or less solemn oath.

There undoubtedly were senators, too, who would have liked to avoid advertising their votes on the Roy O. West proposition any more widely than was absolutely necessary.

Anyway, there was a big majority against making the proceedings officially public.

A senator may not care what the correspondents think of his vote—yet prefer not to have his home folks told. Correspondents are comparatively few and—if they can be kept muzzled—harmless. Home folk can make trouble.

In addition to lying in doubtful form for a correspondent to reveal all he hears concerning the senators' star chamber deliberations, there is some question if it is not slighly risky.

People have been slammed into jail for "contempt of the senate."

This news association took a chance on it, nevertheless.

It was not much of a chance, at that. Several senators are pretty sore and would like to give the culprit a taste of the rack and humbscrews if they could, but they realize that they would only be making a matter worse if they raised a row.

The fact is that the day for such ostentatious secrecy on Capitol Hill is past.

No doubt secret stunts are pulled off, but with a lot of fanfare of "clearing the galleries" and proclaiming, practically with a brass band, "Now we're going to do something on the q. t."

Executive sessions of the senate are a picturesque but anachronistic survival from the olden days when Alexander Hamilton, maybe George Wahington and other aristocrats believed that the less common people knew about the government's insides, he better for all concerned.

Not that there are not plenty of statesmen who think the same thing yet, but today it simply is impossible to plug up the leaks, and then perhaps it could be done.

My favorite way of cooking ham is to parboil it by putting it on in cold water, after washing, and letting it come to a boil, then putting it on again in fresh cold water and cooking it slowly until fairly tender. Take out of liquor, peal off the skin rub dry mustard and brown sugar into the fat, stick cloves in here and there and and bake until brown, about half an hour; longer if the ham is not thoroughly tender. A tablespoon of brown sugar and the same amount of vinegar and a few cloves—or the juice from pickled peaches or pears in the water in which the ham is boiled gives a nice flavor.

Today's Recipes.

Butterscotch Dessert—Make a batter of three well-beaten eggs two cups of brown sugar, one and one-half tablespoons cornstarch, one-fourth teaspoon salt Allow three-fourths of a quart of milk to come to a boil and stir in the batter quickly. Cook for five minutes. When cool, serve with whipped cream, either sweetened or unsweetened, and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Beat yolks of eggs until light, pour the syrup slowly over, beating well as it goes on When well blended add butter, a speck of salt and the fruit juice and rind. This should be spread on a white cake which uses the whites of the eggs.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Answers to Mothers

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.

—Jewish Proverb.

"My little girl of 12 eats so much that I fear she has a tape worm. She has three or four helpings of everything on the table, except meat of which she has two, and eats four or five and sometimes six slices of bread also milk and dessert. And still she is thin! The school doctor claims she should weigh 105 for her height, and she weighs only 98. How can I tell if she has worms, as she never complains and is never sick, but always hungry? She eats everything that is good for her, vegetables and fruits, and lots of them, and milk. Do you think I need worry? MRS. P."

Active children need a tremendous amount of food, Mrs. P. The overweight child eats too much, especially of the starches and sugars, but a thin child very rarely overeats. And a thin child needs more food than the normal weight.

It is a common idea that a voracious appetite means a tape worm. It isn't true. The host of a tape worm is more apt to have a finicky appetite. But, Mrs. P., if your little girl had a tape worm she would be passing segments of it and would probably be having abdominal symptoms.

If she is as well in all ways as you say she is, she must be extremely active and uses up all the food she eats for her excess activities, as well as for her growth. You would probably get her to gain if you see that she rests more. Have her lie down even if she doesn't sleep, for an hour or so every day. See that she gets long hours of sleep at night.

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you may have.

A short time ago I ran a letter from a mother who had an 18-year-old son and had always longed for another child. She was very happy when she found she was with child again, but her friends discouraged her, saying it was a disgrace, as her son was nearly a man, and she would have a hard time, etc. My advice to her was to be happy over the advent of her baby and not allow her friends' abnormal ideas to worry her.

In this morning's mail there were several letters from readers who have had similar experiences and two of them wrote directly to Mrs. M. requesting that I send the letters on to her. So much kindliness this little column of mine shows there is in this world! But, dear followers, we do not keep names and addresses of our correspondents, so we cannot forward letters. However, I will run part of the first letter—the other was similar—for it will be helpful to many women who are going to have children later in life. This is it:

"Dear Mrs. M.' I read your letter in Dr. Peters' column and I felt I must tell you of my experience, as it will encourage you.

"Six years ago, when I was 45 years old and my youngest child was 13 years old, my son nearly 20 and my eldest daughter 18, I found I was to have another. My kind friends (?) were sure I could not live through, as I had had serious times with the others even when I was younger. But I never got along so well before! And I gave birth to a lovely boy with no difficulty. My children worship him and were proud to show him off to everybody.

"A friend of mine is 41 years old and has just given birth to her first baby. She did splendiddly. Now, Mrs. M., just remember how much younger you are than I was and don't fret or worry. MRS. C."

Tomorrow: Whiteheads.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

When a woman is working and earning money or has her own business, should she expect money from her husband? There are many puzzles to the working wife proposition, and this is one of them. Another is, where there are two salaries a couple gets used to a certain manner of living that would not be possible on one and then it is hard for both to adjust themselves later when the wife, for some reason wants to stop working.

Couples who think a great deal of one another and work out their little problems together will have little difficulty. Each will be willing to look after the other's interests but many are selfish, none too loving, and then the separate income business causes trouble. But such people would be hateful anyway, no matter what the circumstances.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a woman 33 years old. My husband is 12 years my senior. I have been married to him 16 years. I am not considered a lazy woman. I am a candy maker by trade and I have mp own business, and my husband is a business man. I have to take care of myself, pay all of my own expenses. Do you think that he treats me right? He says that he doesn't have to give me money. What hurts me so badly is that he doesn't care for me. All women want their husbands to be affectionate sometimes, but when I want to be affectionate with him he says, 'Oh, get away. I am too old for that foolishness.' Sometimes I get so disgusted that I think of leaving him, but I have lived with him all these years and I married him to live with him until death. Tell me how to correct these matters. Do you think that I am to blame? We have no children and he craves them. Do you think that if I undergo an operation to get children he will be better?

"DEVOTED WIFE."

If you had children he might not be more affectionate, but at any rate you would have some one on whom to lavish your affection and that would be a great deal. Your husband may love you very much, but some people just naturally feel foolish when they are called upon to act affectionate—except, of course, when they are courting. Then they are as foolish as anyone. I think where both are working the expenses should be divided between them. That is the only fair way.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am an eighth grade pupil in school and another girl and I are good pals and love each other. Why is it that our teacher disapproves? Do we show partiality? It seems as though other girls can chum and nothing is said. Please tell me why. I am also very sensitive and I know my feelings are easily hurt. My teacher calls this nonsense and pretense. I'm not bad in my studies and not mean in school, yet I never seem to have my teacher's love. I love her very dearly. What am I to do?

"JUST MARY."

Don't you think your extreme sensitiveness may have something to do with your feeling that the teacher does not care for you, dear? She probably thinks it will make life hard for you always if you persist in this, and is trying to make you see it. If she didn't care somewhat for you she would not make the attempt. As to your friendship with this other girl, it is just possible that she does not really disapprove, that you are mistaken, and then, again, she may think that you do not have the best influence on one another. Try to conquer your sensitiveness. Part of it is just your age, and you will realize, as you grow older, that we all pass through the same experiences and you are not singled out to be hurt.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl 18. I am in love with a young man who is 23. He said he loved me, but when I came home he only wrote me three letters. Do you think that is a sign tha he loves me? Can you give me some advice as to how I can win his love back?

"ANXIOUSLY WAITING."

I am afraid out of sight is out of mind with the young man, dear. Better make up your mind to this and get another boy friend.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

RED SQUIRREL "GIVES AWAY" A SECRET

Just a second did that little brown bird stand upright, every feather straight — that was all. Then came that little cry of pain and again the broken wing was dragging upon the ground. But it was too late. Peter had seen that it was every bit as well and strong as the other one. He had caught the bird off its guard.

"So you are fooling me, bird," cried he. "Red Squirrel was telling me the truth! But you might just as well stop your faking. I know now! Your wing is not broken at all. You were so angry at Red Squirrel that you forgot and raised it up and gave yourself away!

"Who are you, anyhow? And why should you play a trick like that upon me? I am a friend of the forest folk—any bird will tell you that I would not hurt one of your pin feathers."

The bird looked ashamed of itself.

"How was I to know that?" it declared. "I spend most of my life here in the woods and I am so shy. Sometimes I wish I was not so scary, but I just can't help being afraid of strangers — and Two-Legs especially. You are tiny and pleasant and all that, but you are a human, just the same, aren't you?"

"Yes," answered the boy, "but —"

"Never mind the buts. Belonging to the race that sets traps for us Partridges and sets dogs upon us and shoots us whenever it can is enough to make me try my best to protect my babies Oh, dear, what have I said!" The bird flapped its wings in dismay.

"You have given away your secret," chuckled Red Squirrel, appearing suddenly from among the leaves, and with a flying leap landing high upon the tree trunk.

"Now, Mother Grouse, the boy will find your babies."

"Keep still, Red Squirrel, you mean old thing," cried the bird, flapping its wings in dismay. "He will not if you don't tell him where they are. It is you who are telling my secret."

"No, I'm not. Yes he will, yes he will," chattered Red Squirrel. "They are in plain sight if he peers in the right places Look like the leaves, so they do, but it will not do them any good. Just like a woman—can't keep a secret. My wife never could!"

With this parting shot Red Squirrel flashed out of sight among the branches.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE BALM OF GILEAD—Is there no balm in Gilead? is there no physician there? why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?—Jeremiah 8:22.

THAT LAKES-TO-ATLANTIC CANAL

An all water route to the Atlantic for the mid-western grain producers has been long discussed. The project of the St. Lawrence canal has received favorable comment. Farmers are dubious about the advisability of pushing the development owing to the change in the wheat belt which is slowly going westward.

E. G. Nourse of the Institute of Economics takes exception to the views of ex-Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa who declared recently in favor of the St. Lawrence ship canal. Mr. Nourse looks at the situation through the experienced eyes of one who has studied the plan for over five years. Aside from showing that Mr. Harding is too optimistic with his figures the current writer views the trend of the entire grain industry to determine what will be its condition in 1945.

Inasmuch as the proposed canal is intended to cut down freight costs on produce from the mid-western farm lands a shift of the grain fields west would eliminate the need of such relief says this writer. "Since the war, the importance of the United States as an exporter of wheat has fallen off very sharply. Apparently the coming of tractors and the combine harvester have no checked this decline, but only with a considerable shift in the wheat belt. It is now necessary to go to the second tier of states west of the Mississippi river before one gets to an important export wheat region, and the recent growth has been chiefly in Kansas and adjoining states of the south west. This area is able to survive in the export market because of its very low costs of production and its easy accessibility to Gulf ports.

It must be remembered, Mr. Nourse says, that it will take at least a dozen years to build the canal and there is no possibility that work could actually be started before 1930 even if government authorization were secured with the utmost promptness. And what is likely to happen in our wheat industry between now and 1942 or 1945?

This is a vast problem that must be worked out by engineers in co-operation with the country's greatest business leaders and will be watched with great interest. The fact that the proposed canal costing so many millions would be closed to commerce by ice at least half of each year is an important factor to be taken into consideration.

INVITATION TO CROOKS

Chicago's appeal to other cities to keep their crooks at home is understandable. Chicago already has all the crooks it needs; and it can see no reason why it should suffer from the depredations of others wished on it. A good neighbor does not throw his garbage onto someone else's land. That is Chicago's viewpoint.

Other cities may retort that they have suffered as much from Chicago-bred crooks, as Chicago has from theirs. They can also point out that the Windy City is crook-infested because it attracts crooks, as it does more desirable tourists. Crooks flock together, as do other birds of a feather. Crime likes company as surely as misery does. They find both in Chicago. Criminals take to big cities because there hiding is easy and the pickings good; and for years Chicago has tolerated an alliance between crime and politics that has made it safe for crooks. They will continue to flock to this el dorado, whatever other cities may do to keep their native talent at home, as long as this condition exists.

Chicago cannot expect other cities to protect it by making themselves equally attractive to vice and crime. The quickest and surest way for any city to rid itself of criminals and deter others from coming to it is to make its climate unhealthy for law breakers. This, at last, Chicago appears to be making a serious effort to accomplish.

Your BROADWAY By Walter Winchell And Mine

NEW YORK. — Walter Gifford, the president of the American Tel and Tel, will tell you that it really happened to him. He came across an amusing cartoon in Punch, the British humor magazine, which dealt with phone service. It pleased President Gifford so much he decided to ask the magazine's permission to reprint it in newspaper advertisements in America.

So he telephoned to Punch, in London, from his New York office: "This is President Gifford of the American Tel and Tel, in New York," he said affably. "That cartoon was very funny, and I do wish you would let me republish it here. What is the cartoonist's name?"

"You got the wrong department!" growled the voice, 3,000 miles away, as it hung up.

NEWSPAPERMAN STUFF

Park Rowgues were chinning about good newspapermen and one of them recalled Gene Fowler's clever ruse to get a yarn concerning the last illness of the elder J. P. Morgan.

It was winter, and, with all the other scoopee makers, Fowler patiently waited in the snow in front of the man's house. They hoped for bulletins from the doctors on the condition of the distinguished patient, for his death would mean terrible depression on the stock market. But the physicians decided not to give out any anouncements.

Finally, Fowler hit upon a plan. When he saw Dr. Walters leave the house, he donned specs and a beard and procured a doctor's satchel. Then he rang the doorbell, and asked for Dr. Walters. He was told Dr. Walters had just departed.

"I am Dr. Fowler," said Gene. "He urged me to join the consultation."

Fowler was admitted, and, once inside, the other doctors told "Doctor Fowler" that he could be of no assistance, as Morgan's passing would only be a matter of hours.

"Very well, gentlemen," said Fowler solemnly, as he hastened away to break one of the most important scoops of the last decade.

The Way of the World

Athletics

The football season has been over for some months, save for the big California game. Baseball will be under way for a new season soon. Looking back over one season of major athletics and contemplating another, one wonders whether the American people aren't a little off balance, a little warped and cramped as to perspective in the matter of athletics. It would seem to be pretty hard for any normal boy to go through high school and not come naturally to believe that studies and scholarship are matters of incidental interest to be found entirely on the edges of the great central interest in athletics. The big things in the high school lad's mind are the football season, the football team, the football record.

This attitude is by not means wholly the fault of the boy. Teachers think and talk too much about sports. Parents think and talk too much about sports. Everybody knows there should be enough exercise to keep the body in good order. Everybody believes in whetting the spirit and the mind by means of contest, but to make athletics first is to miss the main point of education and character building.

Sneaking Efficiently

A successful teacher of public speaking once handed the writer these rules for speaking in public. There are too many of them, but at least they are brief. They are sound rules and are worth your looking over. 1—Speak when you have something to say. 2—Speak what you believe to be true. 3—Prepare thoroughly. 4—Be clear—what CAN be misunderstood WILL be misunderstood. 5—Stick to your subject. 6—Be fair—never misrepresent; never misinterpret. 7—Be brief—recognize terminal facilities. 8—Speak naturally. 9—Be serene — never pompous. 10.—Enunciate clearly. 11 — Suppress craving for applause 12—Stop when through. 13—Aim for earnestness, intensity, sincerity.

Too Much Attention

To enjoy the climate where you are, think and talk less about the weather—if it is bad. To enjoy good health, think and talk less about your ailments—if any.

Forget yourself into a good day.

EUROPE DECLARED INTERESTED IN CALENDAR REVISION

By WILLIAM H. BOOTH

Former President International Chamber of Commerce.

(Willis H. Booth was born at Winnemucca, Nev., Feb. 15, 1874. He attended the University of California for four years. He was formerly treasurer of L. Booth and Sons, machinery manufacturers, and vice president of an electric heating company in Los Angeles. He is now chairman of the board of the Edison Electric Appliance company and vice president of the Security Trust and Savings bank, Los Angeles, and the Guaranty Chamber Trust company of New York. An ex-president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Facific coast, he was vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and president of the International Chamber of Commerce. His office is in New York City.)

An international conference to consider calendar reform would awaken all the world to the need for a sensible system of reckoning time and might give rise to the formulation of a better calendar system than has yet been proposed.

The International Chamber of Commerce has requested the League of Nations to take action contemplating calendar reform and I happen to be a member of the League special committee of inquiry on the reform of the calendar.

The present calendar is a make-shift that was designed before commercial statistics were of importance. All business now bases future activities on its past history.

In England, France, Poland, Sweden, and Italy, is manifested intense interest in favor of an international conference on calendar simplification. I am assured of this in correspondence that I have carried on with people in those countries.

The calendar cannot be reformed by bringing pressure to bear, but only through education. An international conference would bring the necessity for a simplified calendar to the attention of the whole world.

A better plan might be devised by having a conference. If you go to an international conference with a fixed plan, you engender an automatic opposition.

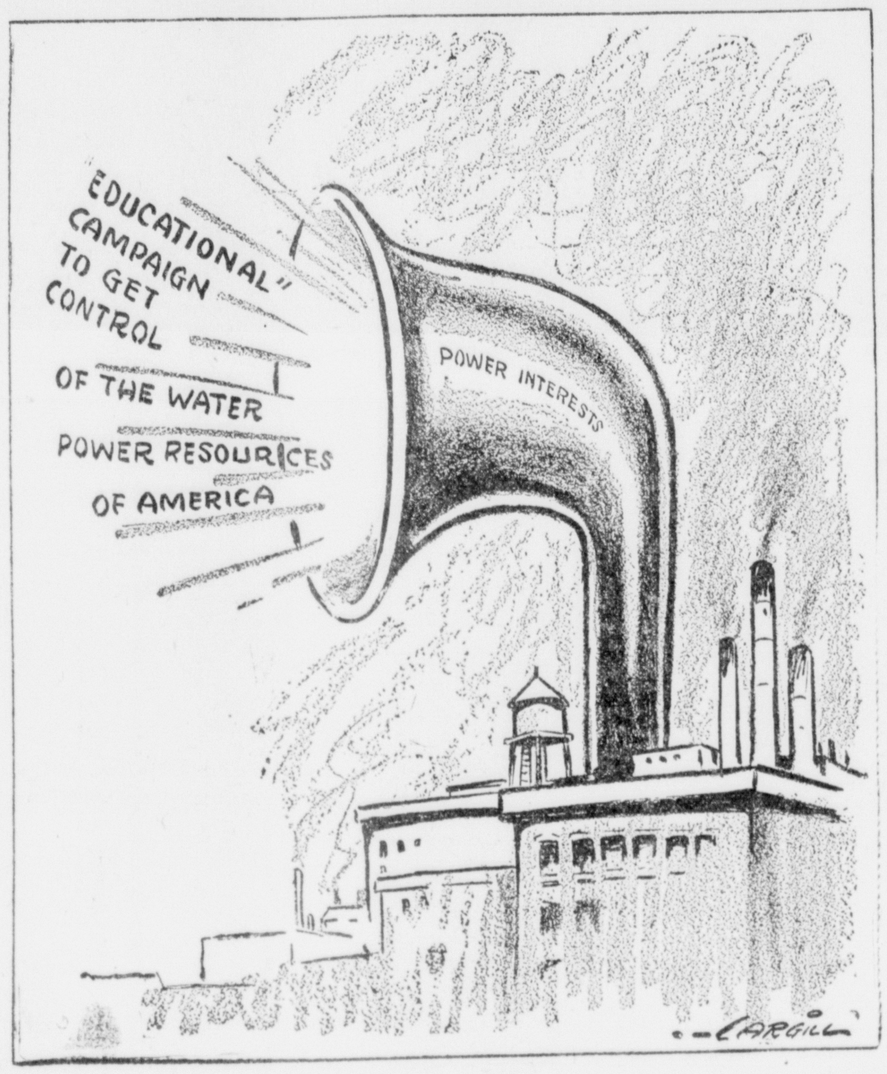
HORN OF "PLENTY"



How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

There is probably no area that is so underdeveloped or else so overdeveloped as the neck and shoulders. For some reason, the average woman forgets that it is quite necessary for her to concentrate exercises on this part of her anatomy, and as a result, all too often scrawny neck and round shoulders result.

A perfectly developed neck is one of the charms which every woman should strive for. A thin neck is not only unbeautiful, but it seems to suggest a general lack of good health that is so important. The exercises that I am suggesting are simple, but they are, nevertheless, very effective. Mind you, I do not desire to suggest anything that will overdevelop the neck or shoulders, for the suggestion of power which comes from overdeveloped muscles is not attractive in a woman. In fact, it is grace and symmetry of line which we hope to gain.

One of the first things that I am going to suggest to you is not only a beauty measure, but a comfort one. Frequently the muscles in the back of the neck become tensed, and headaches and other general forms of illness result. To relieve this tension try dropping your head back just as far as it can go without straining the throat, and permit your mouth to drop open naturally. It is not by any means the most attractive exercise in the world, but I assure you its results are quick and most effective.

Rotating the shoulder blades is a very good exercise for reducing. From a position with the shoulers stretched back, raise them as far upwards as possible and then complete a rotary movement, bring them down in the front, pressing as far down as possible. Repeat this exercise until your muscles are thoroughly tired. It is excellent to fill in the hollows around your neck and to reduce excess fat upon the shoulder blades.

An exercise for the neck is as follows: Turn or twist the head far to one side, looking over the shoulder, until you feel the strain in the side muscles of your neck. Turn the neck far to the other side and stretch. Repeat until tired. Now bring the head as far back as you can looking straight upward. Stretch the throat muscles. Bring the head forward until the chin rests upon the chest and stretch the back of your neck.

Tensing and relaxing the muscles of arm, hand and shoulder is beneficial. To do this, stretch the arm far to the side. Imagine to yourself that you must reach a point two or three inches distant. Stretch the muscles without stirring from the original posture. Keep your shoulders still; relax. Do this until your arm is tired.

Here is another effective exercise for the neck. Lie on a bed and with the head extending over the edge, let the head hang as far dawn as possible. Bring it upward and fordward until the chin touches the chest. Repeat until tired.

If any of these exercises trouble you through inducing a slight dizziness, you may still continue with them, though not too strenuously, for the condition shows that you urgently need them. But do them only a few times in the beginning, until your muscles are stronger.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—One of our leading associations engaged in the dissemination of Washington news takes great credit to itself for discovering how the secret voted recently, in secret session, on the confirmation of President Coolidge's appointment of Roy O. West to his cabinet, as secretary of the interior.

Tush! Every newspaper man in the capital knows, to the last detail, what happens at all the senate's secret sessions.

He knows rather more about the secret sessions than he does about the open ones, because he makes it especially his business to find out. Occasionally a correspondent is accidentally absent from the press gallery during an open session and misses something interesting, but he never neglects to investigate thoroughly when the door is kept shut in his face.

However, ordinarily, it is not considered etiquette for our correspondent to broadcast these secret votes. A little make-believe guessing, as to a few senators, is permissible—but not the revelation of every darned senator's vote, showing that really there is no more secrecy about an executive session of the senate than there is about a radio announcement.

The reason for this bluffing is obvious enough.

All present at one of these secret sessions are sworn to keep the whole thing mum. Publication of virtually a stenographic report quite strongly suggests that somebody must have fractured a more or less solemn oath.

There undoubtedly were senators, too, who would have liked to avoid advertising their votes on the Roy O. West proposition any more widely than was absolutely necessary.

Anyway, there was a big majority against making the proceedings officially public.

A senator may not care what the correspondents think of his vote—yet prefer not to have his home folks told. Correspondents are comparatively few and—if they can be kept muzzled—harmless. Home folk can make trouble.

In addition to being in doubtful form for a correspondent to reveal all he hears concerning the senators' star chamber deliberations, there is some question if it is not slighly risky.

People have been slammed into jail for "contempt of the senate."

This news association took a chance on it, nevertheless.

It was not much of a chance, at that. Several senators are pretty sore and would like to give the culprit a taste of the rack and humbscrews if they could but they realize that they would only be making matter worse if they raised a row.

The fact is that the day for such ostentatious secrecy on Capitol Hill is past.

No doubt secret stunts are pulled off, but with a lot of fanfare of "clearing the galleries" and proclaiming, practically with a brass band, "Now we're going to do something on the q. t."

Executive sessions of the senate are a picturesque but anachronistic survival from the olden days when Alexander Hamilton, maybe George Wahington and other aristocrats believed that the less common people knew about the government's insides, he better for all concerned.

Not that there are not plenty of statesmen who think the same thing yet, but today it simply is impossible to plug up the leaks, and then perhaps it could be done.

My favorite way of cooking ham is to parboil it by putting it on in cold water, after washing, and letting it come to a boil, then putting it on again in fresh cold water and cooking it slowly until fairly tender. Take out of liquor, peal off the skin rub dry mustard and brown sugar into the fat, stick cloves in here and there and and bake until brown, about half an hour; longer if the ham is not thoroughly tender. A tablespoon of brown sugar and the same amount of vinegar and a few cloves—or the juice from pickled peaches or pears in the water in which the ham is boiled gives a nice flavor.

Today's Recipes.

Butterscotch Dessert—Make a batter of three well-beaten eggs two cups of brown sugar, one and one-half tablespoons cornstarch, one-fourth teaspoon salt Allow three-fourths of a quart of milk to come to a boil and stir in the batter quickly. Cook for five minutes. When cool, serve with whipped cream, either sweetened or unsweetened, and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Two cups sugar, one-third cup boiling water, four egg yolks one tablespoon butter, grated rind and juice of one-half orange. Cook the sugar and water to the thread stage. Beat yolks of eggs until light, pour the syrup slowly over, beating well as it goes on. When well blended add butter, a speck of salt and the fruit juice and rind. This should be spread on a white cake which uses the whites of the eggs.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Answers to Mothers

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.
—Jewish Proverb.

"My little girl of 12 eats so much that I fear she has a tape worm. She has three or four helpings of everything on the table, except meat of which she has two, and eats four or five and sometimes six slices of bread also milk and dessert. And still she is thin! The school doctor claims she should weigh 105 for her height, and she weighs only 98. How can I tell if she has worms, as she never complains and is never sick, but always hungry? She eats everything that is good for her, vegetables and fruits, and lots of them, and milk. Do you think I need worry? MRS. P."

Active children need a tremendous amount of food, Mrs. P. The overweight child eats too much, especially of the starches and sugars, but a thin child very rarely overeats. And a thin child needs more food than the normal weight.

It is a common idea that a voracious appetite means a tape worm. It isn't true. The host of a tape worm is more apt to have a finicky appetite. But, Mrs. P., if your little girl had a tape worm she would be passing segments of it and would probably be having abdominal symptoms.

If she is as well in all ways as you say she is, she must be extremely active and uses up all the food she eats for her excess activities, as well as for her growth. You would probably get her to gain if you see that she rests more. Have her lie down even if she doesn't sleep, for an hour or so every day. See that she gets long hours of sleep at night.

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you may have.

A short time ago I ran a letter from a mother who had an 18-year-old son and had always longed for another child. She was very happy when she found she was with child again, but her friends discouraged her, saying it was a disgrace, as her son was nearly a man, and she would have a hard time, etc. My advice to her was to be happy over the advent of her baby and not allow her friends' abnormal ideas to worry her.

In this morning's mail there were several letters from readers who have had similar experiences and two of them wrote directly to Mrs. M. requesting that I send the letters on to her. So much kindliness this little column of mine shows there is in this world! But, dear followers, we do not keep names and addresses of our correspondents, so we cannot forward letters. However, I will run part of the first letter—the other was similar—for it will be helpful to many women who are going to have children later in life. This is it:

"Dear Mrs. M.: I read your letter in Dr. Peters' column and I felt I must tell you of my experience, as it will encourage you.

"Six years ago, when I was 45 years old and my youngest child was 13 years old, my son nearly 20 and my eldest daughter 18, I found I was to have another. My kind friends (?) were sure I could not live through, as I had had serious times with the others even when I was younger. But I never got along so well before! And I gave birth to a lovely boy with no difficulty. My children worship him and were proud to show him off to everybody.

"A friend of mine is 41 years old and has just given birth to her first baby. She did splendidly. Now, Mrs. M., just remember how much younger you are than I was and don't fret or worry. MRS. C."

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

When a woman is working and earning money or has her own business, should she expect money from her husband? There are many puzzles to the working wife proposition, and this is one of them. Another is, where there are two salaries a couple gets used to a certain manner of living that would not be possible on one and then it is hard for both to adjust themselves later when the wife, for some reason wants to stop working.

Couples who think a great deal of one another and work out their little problems together will have little difficulty. Each will be willing to look after the other's interests but many are selfish, none too loving, and then the separate income business causes trouble. But such people would be hateful anyway, no matter what the circumstances.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a woman 33 years old. My husband is 12 years my senior. I have been married to him 16 years. I am not considered a lazy woman. I am a candy maker by trade and I have mp own business, and my husband is a business man. I have to take care of myself, pay all of my own expenses. Do you think that he treats me right? He says that he doesn't have to give me money. What hurts me so badly is that he doesn't care for me. All women want their husbands to be affectionate sometimes, but when I want to be affectionate with him he says, 'Oh, get away. I am too old for that foolishness.' Sometimes I get so disgusted that I think of leaving him, but I have lived with him all these years and I married him to live with him until death. Tell me how to correct these matters. Do you think that I am to blame? We have no children and he craves them. Do you think that if I undergo an operation to get children he will be better?

"DEVOTED WIFE."

If you had children he might not be more affectionate, but at any rate you would have some one on whom to lavish your affection and that would be a great deal. Your husband may love you very much, but some people just naturally feel foolish when they are called upon to act affectionate—except, of course, when they are courting. Then they are as foolish as anyone. I think where both are working the expenses should be divided between them. That is the only fair way.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am an eighth grade pupil in school and another girl and I are good pals and love each other. Why is it that our teacher disapproves? Do we show partiality? It seems as though other girls can chum and nothing is said. Please tell me why. I am also very sensitive and I know my feelings are easily hurt. My teacher calls this nonsense and pretense. I'm not bad in my studies and not mean in school, yet I never seem to have my teacher's love. I love her very dearly. What am I to do?

"JUST MARY."

Don't you think your extreme sensitiveness may have something to do with your feeling that the teacher does not care for you, dear? She probably thinks it will make life hard for you always if you persist in this, and is trying to make you see it. If she didn't care some what for you she would not make the attempt. As to your friendship with this other girl, it is just possible that she does not really disapprove, that you are mistaken, and then, again, she may think that you do not have the best influence on one another. Try to conquer your sensitiveness. Part of it is just your age, and you will realize, as you grow older, that we all pass through the same experiences and you are not singled out to be hurt.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl 18. I am in love with a young man who is 23. He said he loved me, but when I came home he only wrote me three letters. Do you think that is a sign tha he loves me? Can you give me some advice as to how I can win his love back?

"ANXIOUSLY WAITING."

I am afraid out of sight is out of mind with the young man, dear. Better make up your mind to this and get another boy friend.

RED SQUIRREL "GIVES AWAY" A SECRET

Just a second did that little brown bird stand upright, every feather straight — that was all. Then came that little cry of pain and again the broken wing was dragging upon the ground. But it was too late. Peter had seen that it was every bit as well and strong as the other one. He had caught the bird off its guard.

"So you are fooling me, bird," cried he. "Red Squirrel was telling me the truth! But you might just as well stop your faking. I know now! Your wing is not broken at all. You were so angry at Red Squirrel that you forgot and raised it up and gave yourself away!

"Who are you, anyhow? And why should you play a trick like that upon me? I am a friend of the forest folk—any bird will tell you that I would not hurt one of your pin feathers."

The bird looked ashamed of itself.

"How was I to know that?" it declared. "I spend most of my life here in the woods and I am so shy. Sometimes I wish I was not so scary, but I just can't help being afraid of strangers — and Two-Legs especially. You are tiny and pleasant and all that, but you are a human, just the same, aren't you?"

"Yes," answered the boy, "but —"

"Never mind the buts. Belonging to the race that sets traps for us Partridges and sets dogs upon us and shoots us whenever it can is enough to make me try my best to protect my babies. Oh, dear, what have I said!" The bird flapped its wings in dismay.

"You have given away your secret," chuckled Red Squirrel, appearing suddenly from among the leaves, and with a flying leap landing high upon the tree trunk.

"Now, Mother Grouse, the boy will find your babies."

"Keep still, Red Squirrel, you mean old thing," cried the bird flapping its wings in dismay. "He will not if you don't tell him where they are. It is you who are telling my secret."

"No, I'm not. Yes he will, yes he will," chattered Red Squirrel. "They are in plain sight if he peers in the right places. Look like the leaves, so they do, but it will not do them any good. Just like a woman—can't keep a secret. My wife never could!"

With this parting shot Red Squirrel flashed out of sight among the branches.

Several of the players on the Flyer team failed to arrive on time, handicapping it for part of the first half. ARRESTED HERE ON CAPIAS; TO SERVE FORMER SENTENCE

David Simon, 33, colored, 539 E. Main St., was arrested Thursday morning by Sheriff Ohmer Tate on a capias issued by Probate Judge S. C. Wright charging him with failure to comply with an agreement made last October 17 under which he was released from custody after being fined $100 and costs, given a suspended sentence of thirty days in the County Jail and had his driving rights taken away for one year.

Simon had pleaded guilty to operating an auto while intoxicated and the jail sentence was suspended by Judge Wright upon his promise to pay the fine and costs within thirty days. He furnished $105 bond.

Simon was brought before Judge Wright Thursday morning and the court ordered the jail sentence enforced.

Simon was originally arrested after his auto crashed into a stone pillar at the main entrance to the O. S. and S. O. Home on Home Ave. He was unhurt but his car was wrecked.

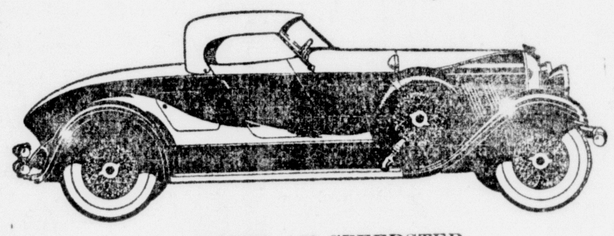
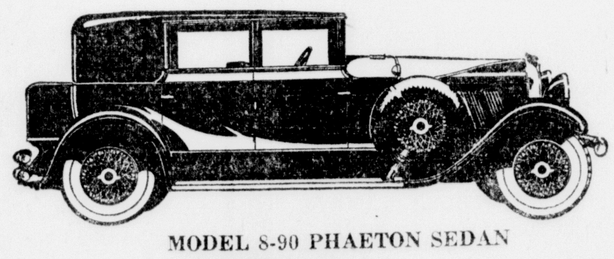
Now You Can Buy AUBURN IN XENIA

Three years ago Auburn determined to build a car so good that it would sell itself after you had driven it. Upon this basis Auburn has built its remarkable success and growth. The car had to be good to win out in this acid test. For this reason we are glad to be appointed Auburn agents for Greene County. Give us an opportunity to prove the above claims of the Auburn Motor Co. at your convenience.

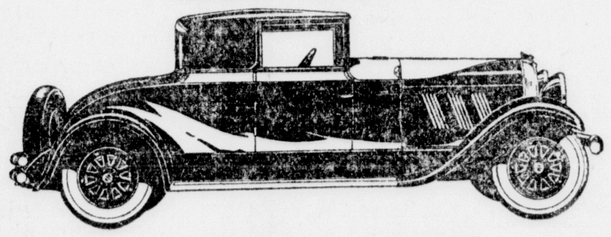
Be A "SHOW ME" Buyer



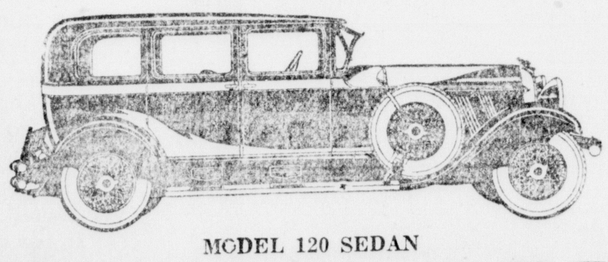
MODEL 120 SPEEDSTER



MODEL 8-90 PHAETON SEDAN



MODEL 6-80 CABRIOLET



MODEL 120 SEDAN

Come to our salesroom and ask for an Auburn

1 car to drive and make it "show you." If it does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy.

2 Or, telephone 51 and ask to have an Auburn sent to your home for a demonstration without obligation to you.

Show me is the attitude to take when buying an automobile, because a salesman cannot talk something into a car that is not built into it. The show me buyer is simply selecting a car with the same business acumen that he uses in buying bonds or real estate or in making any other investment.

The only difference is that he probably knows more about cars.

He has owned several.

He has driven them for years.

His own experience and his own needs qualify him to know what he wants a car to do; how he wants it done and how long it should stand up and endure at its peak of efficiency.

Auburn sales will again increase this year, because—people do know motor cars and can tell the difference by comparing and by driving them.

Sampling is one of the oldest and soundest methods of selling.

Therefore we offer to "show you" any time you care to sample the Auburn.

Come and see for yourself that it does give greater value; better performance; easier handling and does all the things you want a car to do BETTER than ANY other.

If the car then does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy—WE MEAN IT.

There is no magic about Auburn's amazing growth. It is simply a case of giving the buyer MORE for his money.

That is why it is GOOD BUSINESS to buy an Auburn.

Several of the players on the Flyer team failed to arrive on time, handicapping it for part of the first half. However, the Flyers put up a game battle and at one stage of the game were six points in the lead. Flick and Bushmeyer s'arred for the losers. Line-ups and summary:

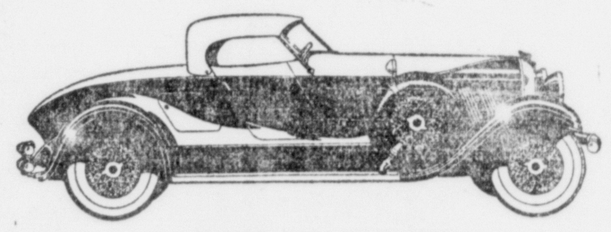
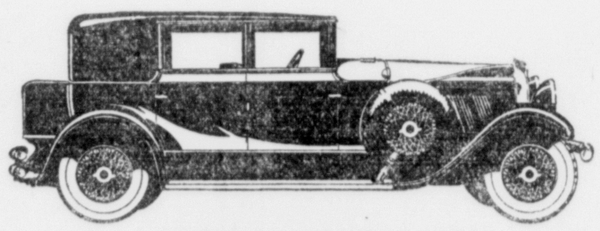
Now You Can Buy AUBURN IN XENIA

Three years ago Auburn determined to build a car so good that it would sell itself after you had driven it. Upon this basis Auburn has built its remarkable success and growth. The car had to be good to win out in this acid test. For this reason we are glad to be appointed Auburn agents for Greene County. Give us an opportunity to prove the above claims of the Auburn Motor Co. at your convenience.

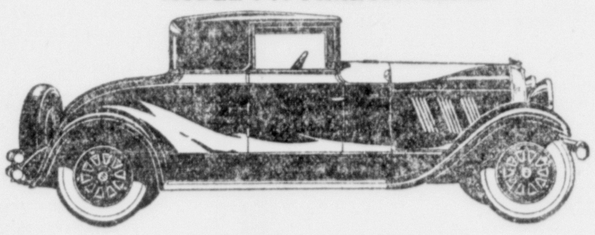
Be A "SHOW ME" Buyer



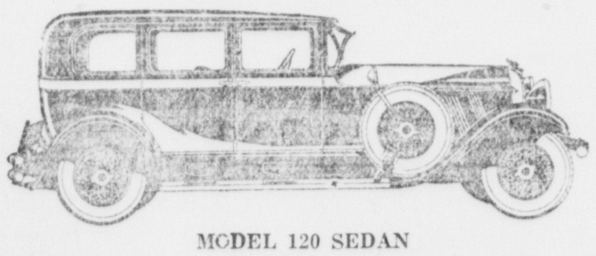
MODEL 120 SPEEDSTER



MODEL 8-90 PHAETON SEDAN



MODEL 6-80 CABRIOLET



MODEL 120 SEDAN

Come to our salesroom and ask for an Auburn

1 car to drive and make it "show you." If it does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy.

2 Or, telephone 51 and ask to have an Auburn sent to your home for a demonstration without obligation to you.

Show me is the attitude to take when buying an automobile, because a salesman cannot talk something into a car that is not built into it. The show me buyer is simply selecting a car with the same business acumen that he uses in buying bonds or real estate or in making any other investment.

The only difference is that he probably knows more about cars.

He has owned several.
He has driven them for years.

His own experience and his own needs qualify him to know what he wants a car to do; how he wants it done and how long it should stand up and endure at its peak of efficiency.

Auburn sales will again increase this year, because—people do know motor cars and can tell the difference by comparing and by driving them.

Sampling is one of the oldest and soundest methods of selling.

Therefore we offer to "show you" any time you care to sample the Auburn.

Come and see for yourself that it does give greater value; better performance; easier handling and does all the things you want a car to do BETTER than ANY other.

If the car then does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy—WE MEAN IT.

There is no magic about Auburn's amazing growth. It is simply a case of giving the buyer MORE for his money.

That is why it is GOOD BUSINESS to buy an Auburn.

VICTIM OF AMNESIA RETURNED TO HOME AFTER ARREST HERE

A suspicious acting stranger picked up in Spring Valley Sunday has been identified by Sheriff Ohmer Tate as Alvin Chandler, 39, of Louisville, Ky., who is believed to have temporarily lost his memory as a result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident in Dayton several weeks ago.

Last Sunday Sheriff Tate was notified by Spring Valley residents that there was a man there who was acting queerly. William Copsey, marshal of the village, acting under instructions from the sheriff, intercepted the stranger as he was getting into an auto, and brought him to Xenia, where he was lodged in the County Jail.

The stranger was unable to give his own name or address but papers discovered in his pockets revealed his name and the fact he had taken out an insurance policy with the Louisville, Ky. Courier-Journal, indicating he lived in that city.

There was also a letter from his wife, Effie, which disclosed Chandler has been hurt in an auto crash in Dayton and had been released from St. Elizabeth Hospital some time ago. His wife, who was ill at the time, had written her husband to meet her in Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was to become employed, as soon as he recovered from his injuries. By occupation he is a brick-layer.

Sheriff Tate deduced from the man's actions that he had been injured about the head in such a manner as to affect his memory. The man could not explain his presence in Spring Valley. His residence in Louisville is at 238 N. Shelby St.

After learning of the circumstances of the case, County Commissioners authorized Probate Court Wednesday to allow Chandler railroad fare to return home. He was given a ticket and placed aboard a train Thursday morning in charge of G. A. Busmeyer, lieutenant of railroad police for the Pennsylvania, who agreed to escort him as far as Cincinnati, where he would be taken in charge by the L and N. Railroad police and conducted the remainder of the distance by train to his home in Louisville.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

To The 5,000 Who Daily Become Owners of the New Ford The CAR Of Satisfaction

YOUR automobile is something like a miniature city. There is an electric light and power system, a water system, a fuel system.

In the new Ford, you will find each of these systems of the latest design and built of the best materials. Every part has been made to serve you faithfully and well and at a minimum of trouble and expense.

Take, for example, the generator—one of the most important parts of the electrical system which supplies the current lighting and for engine ignition.

In the new Ford, the generator is of the power-house type and is distinctive in many features. It has been specially designed to prevent most forms of trouble. Oiling is necessary only once a year. About the only thing you need do is to have the charging rate changed as the seasons change.

Closely allied to the electrical system is the ignition system. It, too, is of new mechanical design in the new Ford. There is but one high tension cable and that connects the coil with the distributor. Even cables from the distributor to the spark plugs have been eliminated. Special care has also been taken to make the distributor water-proof, thus preventing short circuits from rain, etc.

The electrical and ignition systems of the new Ford are so simple in design and so carefully made that they will give you surprisingly little trouble. Yet that doesn't mean they should be neglected. Certain little attentions are needed from time to time.

The storage battery should be given water and the connections kept clean. The generator charging rate should be changed as indicated. Spark plugs should be cleaned at regular intervals. Distributor points should also be kept clean and the distributor cam given a light film of vaseline every 2000 miles.

These are just little things, but they mean a great deal to your car. You can have them looked after at very small cost by the Ford dealer when you take the car in for oiling and greasing.

A thorough checking-up at regular intervals will lengthen the life of your car and give you many thousands of miles of care-free, economical motoring.

OUR SERVICE POLICY

The new Ford is a remarkably fine car for one that costs so little. It is simple in design, constructed of the finest materials, and built to unusually close measurements.

These are the erasons it performs so wonderfully. These are also the reasons that servive requirements are so few and the upkeep costs so low.

When you receive your car, we will explain the simple little things that should be attended to at regular intervals to insure the best performance. We will also tell you something of our own facilities for doing this work promptly and at small cost.

With the purchase of your car, you are entitled to free inspection service at 500, 1,000 and 1,500 miles. This service is due you and we urge you to take full advantage of it. Proper care during its breaking-in period means a great deal to the life of your car.

Included in the free inspection service is the check up of the batteries, the generator charging rate, the distributor, th ecarburetor, adjustment, lights, brakes, shck absorbers, tire inflation and steering gear. The engine oil is also changed and chassis lubricated.

No charge whatever is made for labor or materials incidental to this inspection service, except where repairs are necessary because of accident, neglect or misuse.

The labor of changing the engine oil and lubricating the chassis is also free, although a charge is made for the new oil.

We believe that when you see the good effects of this inspection you will continue to have it done regularly throughout the life of your car. You will find us very helpful in keeping your car in good running order for many thousands of miles at a minimum of trouble and expense.

We operate under close factory supervision and have been specially trained and equipped to do this work promptly, thoroughly and economically.

GREEN STREET — XENIA, OHIO

MRS. MAC DOUGALL IN DISAGREEMENT WITH FORD OPINION

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall, disagrees with both Henry Ford who says saving is not necessary to success, and with Adolph Lewisohn who says that it is.

"It depends on what you save for and how you look at it," Mrs. MacDougall says. "If you save just to save, to see money pile up, it kills your soul. If you save to protect children and their future, that is another matter. But neither men nor women can do both big and little things. They can spend money largely and get large returns. Or they can spend in a niggardly fashion, saving small sums until they become large ones, and they'll have niggardly penny-pinching lives."

Mrs. MacDougall is said to be the foremost business woman in America. She is the head of three large corporations, and has experienced almost every grade of poverty and affluence. She entered business at the age of forty to support her three babies.

KEEP YOUR STOMACH YOUNG AND SWEET

Every bite of food you eat MUST be digested, and the waste matter eliminated. That's sure. If your stomach is sluggish and old, from the excessive acids which keep eating away the gastric juices, you must dissolve them, or you never will be free from indigestion, sour risings, bloating and drowsiness after you eat.

Get a package of Pape's Diapepsin from your nearest drug store and chew one of the tablets after meals. Instantly the distress is relieved, it dissolves the acids, sweetens the stomach and you will have an appetite again like you had when a child.

All drug stores have Pape's Diapepsin. More than 5 million packages are used a year. Adv.

FAITHFUL POLICE MASCOT PASSES ON

Gandy

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 31.—"Patrolman" Gandy is dead. He died from exposure suffered on duty. In trying to keep a larger and younger dog out of police headquarters and chasing a cat the same afternoon, he contracted pneumonia.

Gandy, estimated to have been more than 20 years old, had been the mascot of the police department here for more than fourteen years. He was adopted when two patrolmen riding a district car picked him up one winter night and took him to the station where he was fed and given a warm bed.

Gandy refused to leave the station for the remainder of his life and was extremely jealous of uniformed men.

Gandy was the playmate of every Kansas City child who strayed from its parents and was later found by police. He was in the front line at every annual police inspection, running under the feet of various chiefs of police.

Each afternoon Gandy reported for 4 o'clock roll-call and would go from there directly to the office of Ray D. Ely, chief of detectives, who daily gave him a drink of ice water and a piece of ice on which the canine would chew by the hour.

His bust has been mounted and will occupy a pedestal in the record department next to the pictures of the notorious James brothers.

COLLECTION OF OLD NEWSPAPERS SHOWN

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—A unique collection of old Ohio newspapers will be one of the features of the new south wing of the Ohio State Archaeological Museum which will be completed the latter part of February.

Papers dating from 1803, the date of Ohio's admission to the union, will be collected and preserved here among relics of the state's infancy. The museum now has the only remaining copy of the "Sentinel of the Northeastern Territory" believed to be the oldest extant newspaper in Ohio. It was printed in 1793 in Cincinnati when the city had a population of but 300.

The new offices of the Ohio State Archaeological Society will also be housed in the new wing.

FARM CITY RESIDENCE

On Saturday, February 9th at ten o'clock the farm of R. W. Moore, located about two miles east of Jamestown, Ohio, will be sold at auction at the west door of the Court House at Xenia, Ohio.

Good land. Nearly 170 acres, and buildings.

A good stone quarry on the farm pays a substantial income every year, the stone being bought and crushed by the County Commissioners of Greene Co.

By order of court, the town property, heretofore advertised, has been disposed of at private sale.

MRS. MAC DOUGALL IN DISAGREEMENT WITH FORD OPINION

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall, disagrees with both Henry Ford who says saving is not necessary to success, and with Adolph Lewisohn who says that it is.

"It depends on what you save for and how you look at it," Mrs. MacDougall says. "If you save just to save, to see money pile up, it kills your soul. If you save to protect children and their future, that is another matter. But neither men nor women can do both big and little things. They can spend money largely and get large returns. Or they can spend in a niggardly fashion, saving small sums until they become large ones, and they'll have niggardly penny-pinching lives."

Mrs. MacDougall is said to be the foremost business woman in America. She is the head of three large corporations, and has experienced almost every grade of poverty and affluence. She entered business at the age of forty to support her three babies.

KEEP YOUR STOMACH YOUNG AND SWEET

Every bite of food you eat MUST be digested, and the waste matter eliminated. That's sure. If your stomach is sluggish and old, from the excessive acids which keep eating away the gastric juices, you must dissolve them, or you never will be free from indigestion, sour risings, bloating and drowsiness after you eat.

Get a package of Pape's Diapepsin from your nearest drug store and chew one of the tablets after meals. Instantly the distress is relieved, it dissolves the acids, sweetens the stomach and you will have an appetite again like you had when a child.

All drug stores have Pape's Diapepsin. More than 5 million packages are used a year. Adv.

FAITHFUL POLICE MASCOT PASSES ON

Gandy

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 31.—"Patrolman" Gandy is dead. He died from exposure suffered on duty. In trying to keep a larger and younger dog out of police headquarters and chasing a cat the same afternoon, he contracted pneumonia.

Gandy, estimated to have been more than 20 years old, had been the mascot of the police department here for more than fourteen years. He was adopted when two patrolmen riding a district car picked him up one winter night and took him to the station where he was fed and given a warm bed.

Gandy refused to leave the station for the remainder of his life and was extremely jealous of uniformed men.

Gandy was the playmate of every Kansas City child who strayed from its parents and was later found by police. He was in the front line at every annual police inspection, running under the feet of various chiefs of police.

Each afternoon Gandy reported for 4 o'clock roll-call and would go from there directly to the office of Ray D. Ely, chief of detectives, who daily gave him a drink of ice water and a piece of ice on which the canine would chew by the hour.

His bust has been mounted and will occupy a pedestal in the record department next to the pictures of the notorious James brothers.

COLLECTION OF OLD NEWSPAPERS SHOWN

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31.—A unique collection of old Ohio newspapers will be one of the features of the new south wing of the Ohio State Archaeological Museum which will be completed the latter part of February.

Papers dating from 1803, the date of Ohio's admission to the union, will be collected and preserved here among relics of the state's infancy. The museum now has the only remaining copy of the "Sentinel of the Northeastern Territory" believed to be the oldest extant newspaper in Ohio. It was printed in 1793 in Cincinnati when the city had a population of but 300.

The new offices of the Ohio State Archaeological Society will also be housed in the new wing.

FARM CITY RESIDENCE

On Saturday, February 9th at ten o'clock the farm of R. W. Moore, located about two miles east of Jamestown, Ohio, will be sold at auction at the west door of the Court House at Xenia, Ohio.

Good land. Nearly 170 acres, and buildings.

A good stone quarry on the farm pays a substantial income every year, the stone being bought and crushed by the County Commissioners of Greene Co.

By order of court, the town property, heretofore advertised, has been disposed of at private sale.

Call law office of Marshall and Marshall, or George Smith, Lawyer, Xenia, Ohio, for further details.

COURT BLAMES MOTORIST WHEN PEDESTRIAN STRUCK BY AUTO

A recent court decision places entire blame on a motorist if a pedestrian is struck by an auto while he is walking across a street intersection under the protection of the green light on a traffic signal.

This brings up a form of motoring discourtesy which is now against the law and "is going to get a lot of Xenia drivers in trouble if they are not careful," according to Dilver Belden, auto club secretary. It is likewise going to increase the auto death toll if it is not observed, he asserted.

Secretary Belden explained that the new court ruling means that if a pedestrian starts across the street on the green light and the amber light comes on before he can get entirely across, he still has the right-of-way over cars going in the opposite direction to that in which he is walking.

"If you are making a left-hand turn on the amber and the pedestrian is crossing the street, it is up to you, the driver, to hold your car until he gets across—it is not up to the pedestrian to halt for you.

"The same applies if you are making a right hand turn at a corner on the green light—the people caught in the street when the amber flashes have the right of way.

"If you strike anyone under these conditions the court holds, and the same decision applied all over the United States, that you are to blame. No blame attaches to the pedestrian who started across the street on the green light. The law gives him the right-of-way until he gets across, no matter where he may be on the crossing when the amber light comes on.

"This is a new ruling. It may encourage jay-walking, we don't know about that. But whether it does or not, it is a court decision, and every motorist should understand it and be prepared to abide by it when the occasion for doing so arises."

WOODEN AIRCRAFT BANNED BY BRITAIN

LONDON, Jan. 31.—According to an official announcement by the Air Ministry no more wooden aircraft of any sort is to be built for the Royal Air Force.

This decision is the culmination of a steady movement for several years in the direction of the abolition of wood in the construction of airplanes, and is based on the fact that not only is metal the better material for nearly all phases of aircraft construction, but even more important, it makes the Royal Air Force independent of imported wood.

CHILD WELFARE CONFERENCE IS LARGELY ATTENDED THURSDAY

Representatives of Greene, Clinton and Fayette Counties were in attendance at the morning session of the Tri-County District Child Welfare Conference at the First Methodist Episcopal Church in this city Thursday.

Speakers at the opening session stressed in their remarks the key note of the conference, which is the preservation of the home as a preventive of juvenile dependency and delinquency. Under this subject was discussed the four agencies which should be co-operating to keep the child in his own home, namely, the church, the school, the juvenile court and the social agency.

Miss Belle Greve, Columbus, superintendent of the Division of Charities, Department of Public Welfare, was chairman of the morning session. She told the delegates she believes that if individuals in a community knew more of their local conditions, greater support would be given to public officials and private institutions which are created to work with dependency and delinquency.

The official welcome to the delegates was extended by Louis Hammerle, city school superintendent.

The Rev. R. R. Phelps, Hillsboro, pastor of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who was the first speaker on the program, presented the subject of the place of the church in a community preventive program. This subject was afterward discussed by the Rev. D. Sidney Wood, Washington C. H.; Dr. R. R. McClellan, Xenia, and the Rev. O. H. Folger, Wilmington.

Miss Ruth Jones, director of mothers' pensions and dependency bureau in the domestic relations court of Cincinnati, next spoke on the subject of mothers' pensions, followed by discussion by Edward Goubeaux, Greenville, Darke County auditor; Juvenile Judge S. C. Wright, this city; C. Clayton Terrell, Wilmington, Clinton County Commissioner.

Probation standards was the subject discussed by Judge J. R. Coffin, of the probate court of Wapakoneta. Judge Coffin has been especially interested in probation work, and has made real progress in his methods of handling delinquencies in court.

Prosecuting Attorney J. Carl Marshall, this city, and Probate Judge Hugh Wright, Wilmington, led the discussion which followed the talk.

"The School" formed the subject of Dr. Francis N. Maxfield, of the department of psychology of Ohio State University. This talk was followed by a discussion in charge of Claude A. Brunner, superintendent of schools at Washington C. H.; and H. W. Hodson county school superintendent of Clinton County.

Miss Emma Thompson, secretary of the Home Service Bureau, Civic Association, at Middletown, talked on the importance of the family agency and the discussion which followed was in charge of Mark K. Robinson, connected with the Red Cross at Washington C. H.

C. C. Darby, state chairman of the American Legion welfare committee, also discussed his work.

At the luncheon meeting between 12:45 and 1:45 p. m., the inspirational address was delivered by the Rev. Sidney E. Sweet, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Columbus, who declared that every child has the possibility of becoming a good citizen. Pressure should be brought to bear on the child by all four agencies co-operating to keep the child in his own home, he asid.

"Life should be the development of personality expressed in self-control, self-sacrifice and service. Religion co-operates with the home and school in developing a child's ideals," he said.

The Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of the church, was chairman of the luncheon meeting. The quartet from East High School did not furnish musical entertainment at the noon meeting as scheduled but was booked to appear later on the afternoon program. Women members of the church congregation served luncheon to those in attendance at the conference at noon.

The theme of the morning session was "The Child In His Own Home." The afternoon session's theme was "The Child Out of His Own Home."

FREEZES TO DEATH

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 31.—Alex Gifford, 46, was found frozen to death here late yesterday at the rear of his home.

MAN SURRENDERS TO LIQUOR CHARGE AND PLEADS GUILTY HERE

John P. Wagner, 56, who surrendered to county authorities after five state prohibition agents swooped down on his farm home south of the Dayton-Xenia Railway Co. car barns, half-way between Dayton and Xenia, Wednesday morning and confiscated eight gallons of whiskey, pleaded guilty to possessing liquor when arraigned before Probate Judge S. C. Wright Thursday morning.

Judge Wright deferred sentence until he has had an opportunity to hear the testimony of the dry agents who conducted the raid. Meanwhile Wagner is being held in the County Jail in default of $600 appearance bond.

Wagner was away from home when the raiders uncovered the hidden liquor and so they arrested his wife, Minnie, who was brought to Xenia. When Wagner returned home and learned of the raid and his wife's arrest, he came to Xenia and gave himself up, absolving his wife of ownership of the liquor. She was then released.

The sheriff's office assisted in the case after the raid was made. The dry agents who conducted the raid were Howard Davis, two men by the name of Gary, father and son, and another inspector whose name was not learned. They were working out of Dayton.

One of the agents named Gary was at one time employed as an undercover agent in Greene County.

"General de Braack, one of Napoleon's greatest cavalryleaders, said: 'Smoke yourself and teach your men to smoke. It will comfort you and them under the greatest strain.' One hundred years after de Braack, one million Americans fighting at the front in France and smoking Lucky Strikes found it to be true. Of course, I say reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet. An army man must besides keep fit and not be overweight."
ROBERT LEE BULLARD

THE modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skilfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

BOY SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WILL BE CELEBRATED FEBRUARY 15

The nineteenth anniversary week of Boy Scouts of America, which will be celebrated over the entire country February 10 to 15, will be observed locally with an appropriate anniversary program to which the public is invited Friday night, February 15 at 8 o'clock at Xenia Central High School.

Why be a Scout? Local Scout leaders point out that the Boy Scouts save the nation thousands of dollars annually; that the value of human lives saved cannot be estimated; that the service they render their respective communities show that red-blooded American boys enjoy doing this service; that Scouting is a "do" program.

Another argument advanced is that a Scout learns to be a real woodsman, pioneer, camper, hiker, life-saver, leader and that he grows up to become a real "he man." One local Scout leader declared:

"You become a member of the largest uniformed body in the world; larger than the army, navy and marines combined. You become a member of the largest boys' club in the world, which numbers among its members boys of fifty-five civilized countries of the globe.

"Xenia Scouts have for their use, Camp Miami at Yellow Springs, one of the finest summer camps in this part of Ohio, where many happy days are spent in swimming, life-saving training, woodcraft, nature lore, campfires, outdoor games—Scouts are real campers."

Any boy in Xenia who is twelve years of age is eligible to become a Scout and those interested are urged to get in touch with Scoutmasters J. J. Stout, R. H. Kingsbury and Ernest Blackburn.

BOY SCOUT ANNIVERSARY WILL BE CELEBRATED FEBRUARY 15

The nineteenth anniversary week of Boy Scouts of America, which will be celebrated over the entire country February 10 to 15, will be observed locally with an appropriate anniversary program to which the public is invited Friday night, February 15 at 8 o'clock at Xenia Central High School.

Why be a Scout? Local Scout leaders point out that the Boy Scouts save the nation thousands of dollars annually; that the value of human lives saved cannot be estimated; that the service they render their respective communities show that red-blooded American boys enjoy doing this service; that Scouting is a "do" program.

Another argument advanced is that a Scout learns to be a real woodsman, pioneer, camper, hiker, life-saver, leader and that he grows up to become a real "he man." One local Scout leader declared:

"You become a member of the largest uniformed body in the world; larger than the army, navy and marines combined. You become a member of the largest boys' club in the world, which numbers among its members boys of fifty-five civilized countries of the globe.

"Xenia Scouts have for their use, Camp Miami at Yellow Springs, one of the finest summer camps in this part of Ohio, where many happy days are spent in swimming, life-saving training, woodcraft, nature lore, campfires, outdoor games—Scouts are real campers."

Any boy in Xenia who is twelve years of age is eligible to become a Scout and those interested are urged to get in touch with Scoutmasters J. J. Stout, R. H. Kingsbury and Ernest Blackburn.

PETERSON FREED OF 'COON STEALING CHARGE; TRIAL DRAWS HUGE CROWD

A jury in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning exonerated Russell "Buck" Peterson, farmer, of an indictment for burglary and larceny in connection with the alleged theft of two pet raccoons valued at $20 belonging to his neighbor, Harold D. Middleton, from the locked barn on the farm of his father, Thomas Middleton, Caesarcreek Twp., south of Xenia, last December 17.

Receiving the case Thursday morning after a trial lasting slightly more than one day, the jury deliberated only twenty minutes before returning a verdict of not guilty.

While the trial was in progress the court room was crowded to capacity by 'coon hunters attracted from all parts of the county. Even standing room was at a premium.

The crux of the case was whether two skins marked Exhibit A once covered the pet raccoons belonging to Harold Middleton, or whether they were the personal property of two free and untrammeled 'coons. Peterson was indicted for burglary and larceny and petit larceny and it is probable the latter indictment will now be nolled by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall in view of the fact Peterson has been vindicated of the more serious charge.

The Middleton coons disappeared last December 17. Peterson, testifying in his own defense, asserted that his dogs treed the 'coons and that when the animals were brought to the ground, he killed them without using his gun, thus accounting for the absence of shot holes or marks of the dogs' fangs in the hides.

The two hides were sold by Peterson to Roy Duerstine, Xenia, and were exhibited in court. It was pointed out by the prosecutor that the absence of two toes on one of the hides served as an identification mark to prove the hides belonged to Middleton.

The defense presented evidence to prove that missing toes on a raccoon are not uncommon, since the animals frequently lose parts of their anatomy in traps.

Personnel of the jury: C. E. Thuma, Orvin Glass, Winnie Sutton, G. J. Smith, Edna M. Winter, Edith Blair, Archie Gordon, Clarence Storck, Anna Herr, Mollie F. Landrum, W. A. Anderson and Mowdy Eichman.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie Eyler and one son, Fred of St. Joseph, Mo. Another son, Harry, died in Dayton a month ago. Mr. Eyler visited in Xenia during the home-coming last August and renewed acquaintance with many friends of his early days at that time.

THEORY O. K.—BUT COP DIDN'T KNOW

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The power of mind over matter failed to keep Ethel Kauffman out of jail.

Miss Kauffman was arrested on charges of burglary and petty theft by Patrolman Andrew Skelly who said he had never heard of "power of mind over matter."

Police say the woman took a dress from a downtown department store.

"You're under arrest," Skelly told her when he called at her apartment.

She gazed steadily into his eyes, made a few passes, and then told him that "power of mind over matter" was holding him helpless.

New Dodge Brothers Six

BY WALTER P. CHRYSLER

Dodge Brothers Six Mono-piece Body is the most sensational development among the recent new-car features.

Exclusive Mono-piece Body Revolutionizes Motor Car Design

Built inflexibly onto the wide chassis, the Mono-piece Body has that inherent rigidity which only single-piece construction can give. For the Mono-piece Body is literally one piece. There is not a seam from front to rear. Body sills, door openings, window apertures—all are fashioned from a single piece of metal.

There simply are no joints to squeak in this amazing Mono-piece Body. Tens of thousands of miles of hardest usage—continuous travel over the roughest roads—changing weather conditions—leave the Dodge Brothers Six body as firm, as solid and as free of structural noises as when new. Perfect balance—exceptional riding steadiness—safety under every driving circumstance—are assured through the employment of Mono-piece Body design. And finally—no space is wasted within the car. Exceptional roominess is achieved with a new degree of grace. Doors and windows are extra wide. There is ample head, leg and elbow room.

It will well repay you to visit the nearest Dodge Dealer and examine Mono-piece construction. He has a special unfinished section of a Mono-piece Body which instantly reveals the reasons for its superior strength, its perfect rigidity, and why it will not develop squeaks and rattles.

Then ride in and drive the new Dodge Brothers Six. Learn what extraordinary performance, comfort, beauty and quality are possible in a car of so low a price. When you have compared these remarkable cars with any other values at or near their prices, we know you too will say the new Dodge Brothers Six—presented by Walter P. Chrysler—is the most important development in Dodge Brothers history.

Spacious, Smart and Eminently Fine New Dodge Senior

Chrysler-inspired and sponsored, the new Dodge Senior is the largest, handsomest, and finest Dodge Brothers product of all time. Here is custom-car style and luxury—big-car spaciousness and road-ease—a mechanical soundness and surety that is traditional with Dodge Brothers. And the new Dodge Senior is a finished performer—powerful and flexible for any emergency—smooth and swift on the road—magically easy to handle and to steer. It is the sincerest expression of Dodge Brothers craftsmanship, enriched and enlivened with the fine spirit of all Chrysler achievement. It is a classic among modern motor cars.

Passed Up!

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MADE MEN LIKE HER

By ROE FULKERSON

© 1929 by Central Press Association, Inc.

CHAPTER I

Betty Brown did not want to be kissed. She wanted men to want to kiss her.

Only an eighteen-year-old girl can think at such cross-purposes.

She was at the first dance given by her high school class graduated a short time before. The eighty young people in the class were about equally divided between the fair and unfair sexes. Seventy-five attended this dance at the Country club. Half were dancing, the others scattered about the grounds, in the shadows of the trees, snuggled in the dark corners of the clubhouse porch, and slipping in and out of cars parked just under the veranda where Betty stood.

With George Harris, the next-door neighbor who had brought her to the dance, she stood on the veranda in the moonlight. It seemed to Betty that George was always beside her. All through high school he had walked to school with her mornings, taken her to athletic events, and the school dances.

George was a serious-minded boy, not given to demonstrations of affection. As she listened to his monologue about the work of the committee on arrangements for the dance, and heard his plans to make it an annual affair, she wondered what he would do if she suddenly put her face up to his to be kissed.

This unusual thought was the result of the scenes around her, of which she was keenly conscious, but which George seemed not to notice.

Over his shoulder Betty could see a swing in the dark corner of the veranda. A girl was in the corner of the swing, a boy sitting so close to her that their two shadowy figures seemed to melt into one. Betty saw his dark coat sleeve across her white dress. From time to time his black-haired head blotted out the girl's face entirely. Betty knew he was kissing her.

George continued to talk of the success of the party. She dropped encouraging monosyllables from time to time to keep him talking while she was busy with her thoughts.

She looked over the tops of the cars parked beneath the veranda; toward her came another couple, walking leisurely to the parked cars. The boy's arm was around the girl; she was looking up into his face, singing. The moonlight shone on an auriole of blonde hair framing her face in gold. Her low throaty contralto sang:

"Fish gotta swim, birds gotta fly,
I gotta love one man 'til I die.
Can't help lovin' that man!"

At the conclusion of each short stanza, the boy stooped and kissed her. He opened the door of the parked car and they stepped in.

There was no more of the song.

Betty wondered what she would do if a boy kissed her like that. Would she slap his face? Would she respond? She had long ago made up her mind not to permit such liberties; tonight she realized she had never had occasion to protect herself from them.

Turning impatiently to George she said:

"Let's go to the other end, and get away from these petting parties!"

Strolling along the veranda they passed a couple which separated hastily as they approached. The boy sat in a big wicker porch chair and the girl was balanced perilously on its arm. Betty wondered if the girl had been on his knee.

The opposite end of the veranda gave a view over the golf course. As the orchestra started up, Betty saw two couples come out of the shadows of the trees around the first tee and stroll toward the house. One girl combed her bobbed hair.

George had concluded his long monologue, but Betty had long since lost the thread of his story. Her "How interesting!" seemed to satisfy him.

"Let's go dance," he suggested. "As chairman of the committee on arrangements it's my duty to be seen on the floor."

"Let me stay here," she suggested. "There are several girls on your committee you should dance with. I'll stay here in the moonlight. If I want to dance I'll come in."

"Shall I send Pete or one of the boys out to you?"

"No, please, I'd like to be alone with the moon."

"Remember!" George declaimed with a ponderous attempt at humor. "The ancient Greeks evolved the word 'lunatic' from the root 'luna,' meaning 'moon.' They thought the rays of the moon made people insane."

"I feel tonight as though there were something in the idea!" laughed Betty.

What was there about her that made the boys of the school pass her up? She recalled with what pleasure she had once heard a boy refer to her as a part of the high-brow crowd. That must be the trouble. She thought the average high school boy was far from high-brow; but she believed she was attractive to the better class of boys.

"Hey, Sister!" A boy came toward her from the club entrance. "Why so pensive and alone when there is so much important kissing to be done and the nicest moon that ever—'Scuse, Betty!" he finished, lamely, "I didn't know it was you!"

"George, am I pretty?"

"No?" She was more confused than he. "And I don't come in the kissing group?"

She was abashed at her involuntary remark.

"Gosh, I would as soon think of trying to kiss the forty-seventh problem of Euclid!" laughed the boy, passing on.

Until tonight she would have felt complimented at such a statement, but the woman in her was hurt cruelly by the remark. She had never felt that way before. What was it about her that inspired a remark like that?

She shook her head impatiently and went into the ballroom, where couples circed in a slow watz. The stag line did not notice her, but George, conversing with a professor of mathematics, came to her immediately, and finished the waltz with her.

At the conclusion of the dance many drifted through the big open windows onto the moonlit veranda. George took her to the professor of mathematics, who tried to induce her to take up teaching as a life work.

She looked at him and at his rather dowdy wife. She did not feel as much complimented as she would have a few days before. Somehow culture had lost its lure.

She asked George to take her out onto the veranda, complaining of the heat. Once outside she turned to him and asked:

"George, am I pretty?"

"Why, of course!" he answered, as though there was no doubt of it in his mind. Had he stopped there she would have been pleased, but he continued:

"But of what consequence is mere prettiness? Dozens of girls in our class have doll baby prettiness. It is depth of character and brains which really count."

"Count how? Count where? Count when?" asked Betty.

"Count in the final analysis," answered George, pedantically. "Who is interested in mere surface things like prettiness, clothes and things of that sort?"

"Every one seems to be!" commented Betty, plaintively.

"No one who counts!" assured George. Then he launched into a general discussion of the beauty of character which sounded to Betty as though he were rehearsing a speech. She believed he had forgotten her existence and was talking to an imaginary audience. George had wanted to be a lawyer, but lack of money had forced him to take a position as cashier in a big down town restaurant.

Would he never stop! George had never irritated her before. She had liked his clear-cut way of thinking and the logical way he put his views.

His right hand rested on the veranda rail. She moved so her shoulder came just under his arm. She wanted to see what he would do. He removed his hand from the rail, clasping it behind him, and continued his conversation. She felt disappointed. He had not noticed it.

Was the trouble with her, or was George self-centered? She determined not to let him monopolize her society so much in the future. As the orchestra struck up again he explained that he had this dance with the professor's wife. She told him to go ahead.

Pete Halloran passed her and she hailed him.

"Want to dance?" he asked. Pete was the captain of the baseball team, an irresponsible youth she had never cared for. Now she wanted him to talk to her.

"I would rather stand here if you do not mind, Pete," she answered.

"Me and you both!" Pete hopped upon the rail beside her. "I am danced ragged, but I got to beat it when the orchestra stops. I got a sitting out date with a skirt that's got some gin in her car. I am her next customer. But Gee! I shouldn't have told you that, Miss Volstead!"

"I have never tasted gin!" said Betty.

"Then how do you know you would not like it?" demanded Pete. "There are a lot of interesting things I suspect you have never done because you took some one's word for it that they were naughty. But life is like that." He sighed. "Some drink, some dance and some just carry out empties!"

"Where are you putting me?"

"I don't think I ever tried to place you!" laughed Pete. She winced, but he went on. "I guess you just sort of sit around and disapprove."

"Why do you say that, Pete? I don't remember having disapproved of—"

"Oh, mebbe not!" he agreed, carelessly, "but what's the difference? I know you are a serious-minded girl. You have even got me in a serious conversation, but there is the end of the dance! Listen to the orchestra keeping quiet! I am going to get the gin princess and shake off this sorrow you have instilled into me." He scudded for the dance floor.

Why didn't boys get her into a corner and make love to her? What was wrong with her? Was she unattractive? Had she stuck too close to George? Did she really seem so superior?

For some unknown reason she felt if some boy did not make love to her she would cry. She would not permit it, of course, but she wanted just one to try!

Was she physically unattractive? Was modesty a mistake, and did men like women better if they were brazen in speech and dress? The fluffy, made-up girls of her class always had dates with boys. Was it because they permitted liberties?

Betty returned to the ballroom and some boy whose name she could not remember asked her to dance. He held her very close, and for the first time in her life she did not pull away. He did not talk, so she watched the other couples over his shoulder.

The most popular girl in school, a tiny thing with sleek, black hair, wore a circular skirt. Her partner's arm pulled it shorter than it was intended to be, and that made it more abbreviated than any dress in the room.

Her stockings were girdle-fastened and the full swirling skirt showed their sheen far above her shapely knees. The eyes of the stag line followed her around the room.

Betty watched another popular girl dancing with Andy Adair, not a word or an inch between them. Their eyes were closed; Andy's lips were parted. As she watched, Andy opened his eyes, looked at his partner, then whirled her out one of the French windows into the dark.

Neither of these girls was clever. It must be physical appeal which made men like one. Did she have it? She knew she was brighter than these girls. She could more than meet them in small talk and the wise cracking chatter of the young folk. She determined to give this problem the same systematic study she had used in her school work.

The dance over, she asked George to take her home. They had come out on the street car, but Andy Adair asked them to ride home in the rumble seat of his roadster. He was the only boy in high school who had always had his own car. He drove with one hand, his other arm slipping along the seat behind his girl. She pillowed her head on his shoulder and sang jazz songs all the way into the city.

CHAPTER LXIII

It was a crisp, cold night, straight overhead the moon, pale, without substance, looked as if it had been fastened there with thumb-tacks. The black trunk of the elm seemed to stretch out its great leafless arms toward her yearningly as she walked past it.

Square patches of light from the windows poured into the fast darkening shadows that were slowly descending upon the house.

Even the windows seem to be sending me a welcome, thought Byrd, with a strange, burning sensation creeping along her white throat. She swallowed hard.

She'd have to think of some funny stories to tell Mandy so that she wouldn't begin weeping as soon as she saw her. She'd be very gay and flippant. She'd tell her her father's perennial story about the colored lady who had two beaux.

Byrd was waiting for Pat and Chet. She was standing on the walk looking at the house.

The windows seemed to twinkle like prisms with the color and light that shone from inside.

For an instant, she could imagine little faces gleaming in them. Baby faces!

"It's one of the most expressive houses that it's ever been my privilege to meet," said Byrd, almost aloud, and with a tiny smile at the idea. "It's really got a personality all it's own."

"Chet's putting the car into the garage," said Pat, her voice hinting a suppressed excitement. "He thinks it looks like rain, but he says we're to go on in."

"Rain!" began Byrd. "With a moon like that—"

But Pat had already stepped up to the door and pressed the button while Byrd hung back in the shadows.

But immediately she turned to Byrd and said nervously:

"Oh, I left my bag in the car. I'll run back and get it."

Byrd, panic-stricken, tried to stop her as she brushed by and dashed down the steps.

She couldn't walk into the house and meet those people alone. She couldn't!

She turned in terror to follow Pat, but before she had reached the lower step, the door had opened.

She was trembling from head to foot with a nervous excitement.

She came back slowly, and then glanced up.

There stood Larry, silhouetted against the light! The rays of color seemed to separate one from the other like a spectrum, and danced and vibrated around his head.

Something hard as metal seemed to press upon her lungs, and she found she couldn't breathe. She felt as if she were dying and were watching her spirit move away from her body, leaving it stone.

Like a complete drama, the moment seemed to hang tensely between them.

Suddenly Larry swept her through the door and she was in his arms. They stood without speaking, their lips laid against each other, and their hearts fusing in a common beat. He drew her, still dazed and bewildered, into the hall and closed the door behind them.

Byrd looked at him as if she were still dreaming, a pitiful, beseeching look that begged him not to destroy the illusion.

"Just can't believe it, can you, darling?" he asked, smiling down at her.

He drew her into the living room and took off her hat and coat.

She shook her head. The bright tears that edged her deep, tangled lashes looked like tiny necklaces of transparent jewels. They were the bright symbols of a happiness that was lighted deep within.

"Pat and Chet!" she reminded him. "You've locked them out!"

"You bet I have," said Larry, exultantly. "I've locked out the whole world tonight."

"What does it all mean, Larry?" asked Byrd, tremulously.

"It means that I've bought this house! It's bought and paid for, and it's in your name!"

He kissed her again. Then he placed her gently in the big, upholstered chair. With eyes brimming with sudden tears, he kissed the top of her bronze hair, softly, reverently, like a prayer. She caught the fervor of their first meeting. Larry had kissed her just like that before they had ever exchanged a word.

Then, with a groan of contrition, Larry dropped to his knees at her feet and buried his head in her lap. His big shoulders shook, and his body, built like a hull of a ship, moved as if caught in a sudden storm. Finally he lifted his face to hers.

"Can you forgive me ever for all the pain I've caused you?" he whispered.

And Byrd gathered him, like a little child, into her arms.

Hand-in-hand, like two children, they went through the house. Byrd touched lovingly the pieces of furniture that they had bought together just a few months ago. She felt now that she must have died during those days of their separation and this was the resurrection. They went upstairs and Byrd looked rapturously at the familiar walls and furniture of their bedroom.

The rooms were shining with fragrant cleanliness.

"Why, the house looks as if it had just come back from the dry cleaners!" she exclaimed.

The odor of browned butter and fresh vegetables floated up the stairs.

"Dinner," announced Larry, "is being served in the dining car ahead."

As they descended the stairs, arm-in-arm, Byrd was about to remark that there was a secret hand behind all this magic. She wanted to know how it all happened to happen! Then she saw a great hulk of a black figure in a spotless white apron sweep toward her, and she found herself on a heaving precipice which turned out to be Mandy's ample bosom.

"Hallelujah, bress de Lord, bress all his angels and make a joyful noise unto de Lord!" She closed her eyes for a moment. "Oh thank Lord my bressed chile come home again!" she said in a low voice, her tones muffled with emotion.

"Mandy! My Mandy Ammonia!" was all that Byrd could say, and they wept together, first crying and then laughing.

"But, Mandy," said Byrd, reproachfully, "I wanted to hear you say, 'Shut yo' face'."

"Yes ma'am shut yo' face ef I wasn't surprised! Mister Browning done tole me we was havin' Miss Pat and her husband fo' dinner!"

They sat down to consomme.

"She's planned a 'bankwet' fit for the queen of Rumania," said Larry, "the sly bird really guessed it was to be for you."

Byrd barely touched her broth. Mandy stood behind her with reproachful eyes and so she quickly drank it.

Then came the southern dish which made all good southern cooks famous, roast duck and wild rice, with vegetables and salad.

Between courses Byrd and Larry sat on one chair and hastily moved back to their own places when the dining room door began to swing. Then behind Mandy's back, Larry dropped a string of butterfly kisses from her forehead down her straight, little nose, over her soft lips, down to her white shoulder.

He looked at her longingly as if this intimate hour had revealed her to him for the first time like an unexpected star which had been remote but now was near and warm.

Byrd could now think of Larry bending tenderly over a tiny form in a cradle.

They had their coffee in the living room in front of the snapping and crackling logs in the fireplace. Words seemed unequal to the occasion and they fell back on the silence that was so much more electric.

"I'd like to talk to father," said Byrd, moved by a sudden inspiration. "Will you put in the call, dear?"

The call was put through quickly and Byrd trembled with excitement as she put the receiver to her ear.

"Hello, Jimsy," she said, with a slight tremor in her voice, "Mrs. Lawrence Browning speaking." She smiled at his answer. "Larry and I have just finished dinner." She listened again. "Mandy's, of course." She laughed again. "I'll say she can beat anyone in our family—which means me! We're calling you to give you a special message. Listen, dad. Is your heart pretty strong? Can it stand a shock? Well, I thought you might like to know—now, wait until I get through talking, you funny, old thing—" she turned slightly to include Larry in the message—"that you're going to be a grandfather soon."

At his end of the line, Jim Hamilton jiggled the hook up and down, excitedly, but nothing but a distant whirr met his ear.

Larry had picked Byrd up bodily and was holding her in his arms.

Passed Up!

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MADE MEN LIKE HER

By ROE FULKERSON

© 1929 by Central Press Association, Inc.

CHAPTER I

Betty Brown did not want to be kissed. She wanted men to want to kiss her.

Only an eighteen-year-old girl can think at such cross-purposes.

She was at the first dance given by her high school class graduated a short time before. The eighty young people in the class were about equally divided between the fair and unfair sexes. Seventy-five attended this dance at the Country club. Half were dancing, the others scattered about the grounds, in the shadows of the trees, snuggled in the dark corners of the clubhouse porch, and slipping in and out of cars parked just under the veranda where Betty stood.

With George Harris, the next-door neighbor who had brought her to the dance, she stood on the veranda in the moonlight. It seemed to Betty that George was always beside her. All through high school he had walked to school with her mornings, taken her to athletic events, and the school dances.

George was a serious-minded boy, not given to demonstrations of affection. As she listened to his monologue about the work of the committee on arrangements for the dance, and heard his plans to make it an annual affair, she wondered what he would do if she suddenly put her face up to his to be kissed.

This unusual thought was the result of the scenes around her, of which she was keenly conscious, but which George seemed not to notice.

Over his shoulder Betty could see a swing in the dark corner of the veranda. A girl was in the corner of the swing, a boy sitting so close to her that their two shadowy figures seemed to melt into one. Betty saw his dark coat sleeve across her white dress. From time to time his black-haired head blotted out the girl's face entirely. Betty knew he was kissing her.

George continued to talk of the success of the party. She dropped encouraging monosyllables from time to time to keep him talking while she was busy with her thoughts.

She looked over the tops of the cars parked beneath the veranda; toward her came another couple, walking leisurely to the parked cars. The boy's arm was around the girl; she was looking up into his face, singing. The moonlight shone on an auriole of blonde hair framing her face in gold. Her low throaty contralto sang:

"Fish gotta swim, birds gotta fly,
I gotta love one man 'til I die.
Can't help lovin' that man!"

At the conclusion of each short stanza, the boy stooped and kissed her. He opened the door of the parked car and they stepped in.

There was no more of the song.

Betty wondered what she would do if a boy kissed her like that. Would she slap his face? Would she respond? She had long ago made up her mind not to permit such liberties; tonight she realized she had never had occasion to protect herself from them.

Turning impatiently to George she said:

"Let's go to the other end, and get away from these petting parties!"

Strolling along the veranda they passed a couple which separated hastily as they approached. The boy sat in a big wicker porch chair and the girl was balanced perilously on its arm. Betty wondered if the girl had been on his knee.

The opposite end of the veranda gave a view over the golf course. As the orchestra started up, Betty saw two couples come out of the shadows of the trees around the first tee and stroll toward the house. One girl combed her bobbed hair.

George had concluded his long monologue, but Betty had long since lost the thread of his story. Her "How interesting!" seemed to satisfy him.

"Let's go dance," he suggested. "As chairman of the committee on arrangements it's my duty to be seen on the floor."

"Let me stay here," she suggested. "There are several girls on your committee you should dance with. I'll stay here in the moonlight. If I want to dance I'll come in."

"Shall I send Pete or one of the boys out to you?"

"No, please, I'd like to be alone with the moon."

"Remember!" George declaimed with a ponderous attempt at humor. "The ancient Greeks evolved the word 'lunatic' from the root 'luna,' meaning 'moon.' They thought the rays of the moon made people insane."

"I feel tonight as though there were something in the idea!" laughed Betty.

What was there about her that made the boys of the school pass her up? She recalled with what pleasure she had once heard a boy refer to her as a part of the highbrow crowd. That must be the trouble. She thought the average high school boy was far from highbrow; but she believed she was attractive to the better class of boys.

"Hey, Sister!" A boy came toward her from the club entrance. "Why so pensive and alone when there is so much important kissing to be done and the nicest moon that ever—'Scuse, Betty!" he finished, lamely, "I didn't know it was you!"

"George, am I pretty?"

"No?" She was more confused than he. "And I don't come in the kissing group?"

She was abashed at her involuntary remark.

"Gosh, I would as soon think of trying to kiss the forty-seventh problem of Euclid!" laughed the boy, passing on.

Until tonight she would have felt complimented at such a statement, but the woman in her was hurt cruelly by the remark. She had never felt that way before. What was it about her that inspired a remark like that?

She shook her head impatiently and went into the ballroom, where couples circed in a slow watz. The stag line did not notice her, but George, conversing with a professor of mathematics, came to her immediately, and finished the waltz with her.

At the conclusion of the dance many drifted through the big open windows onto the moonlit veranda. George took her to the professor of mathematics, who tried to induce her to take up teaching as a life work.

She looked at him and at his rather dowdy wife. She did not feel as much complimented as she would have a few days before. Somehow culture had lost its lure.

She asked George to take her out onto the veranda, complaining of the heat. Once outside she turned to him and asked:

"George, am I pretty?"

"Why, of course!" he answered, as though there was no doubt of it in his mind. Had he stopped there she would have been pleased, but he continued:

"But of what consequence is mere prettiness? Dozens of girls in our class have doll baby prettiness. It is depth of character and brains which really count."

"Count how? Count where? Count when?" asked Betty.

"Count in the final analysis," answered George, pedantically. "Who is interested in mere surface things like prettiness, clothes and things of that sort?"

"Every one seems to be!" commented Betty, plaintively.

"No one who counts!" assured George. Then he launched into a general discussion of the beauty of character which sounded to Betty as though he were rehearsing a speech. She believed he had forgotten her existence and was talking to an imaginary audience. George had wanted to be a lawyer, but lack of money had forced him to take a position as cashier in a big down town restaurant.

Would he never stop! George had never irritated her before. She had liked his clear-cut way of thinking and the logical way he put his views.

His right hand rested on the veranda rail. She moved so her shoulder came just under his arm. She wanted to see what he would do. He removed his hand from the rail, clasping it behind him, and continued his conversation. She felt disappointed. He had not noticed it.

Was the trouble with her, or was George self-centered? She determined not to let him monopolize her society so much in the future. As the orchestra struck up again he explained that he had this dance with the professor's wife. She told him to go ahead.

Pete Halloran passed her and she hailed him.

"Want to dance?" he asked. Pete was the captain of the baseball team, an irresponsible youth she had never cared for. Now she wanted him to talk to her.

"I would rather stand here if you do not mind, Pete," she answered.

"Me and you both!" Pete hopped upon the rail beside her. "I am danced ragged, but I got to beat it when the orchestra stops. I got a sitting out date with a skirt that's got some gin in her car. I am her next customer. But Gee! I shouldn't have told you that, Miss Volstead!"

"I have never tasted gin!" said Betty.

"Then how do you know you would not like it?" demanded Pete. "There are a lot of interesting things I suspect you have never done because you took some one's word for it that they were naughty. But life is like that." He sighed. "Some drink, some dance and some just carry out empties!"

"Where are you putting me?"

"I don't think I ever tried to place you!" laughed Pete. She winced, but he went on. "I guess you just sort of sit around and disapprove."

"Why do you say that, Pete? I don't remember having disapproved of it."

"Oh, mebbe not!" he agreed, carelessly, "but what's the difference? I know you are a serious-minded girl. You have even got me in a serious conversation, but there is the end of the dance! Listen to the orchestra keeping quiet! I am going to get the gin princess and shake off this sorrow you have instilled into me." He scudded for the dance floor.

Why didn't boys get her into a corner and make love to her? What was wrong with her? Was she unattractive? Had she stuck too close to George? Did she really seem so superior?

For some unknown reason she felt if some boy did not make love to her she would cry. She would not permit it, of course, but she wanted just one to try!

Was she physically unattractive? Was modesty a mistake, and did men like women better if they were brazen in speech and dress? The fluffy, made-up girls of her class always had dates with boys. Was it because they permitted liberties?

Betty returned to the ballroom and some boy whose name she could not remember asked her to dance. He held her very close, and for the first time in her life she did not pull away. He did not talk, so she watched the other couples over his shoulder.

The most popular girl in school, a tiny thing with sleek, black hair, wore a circular skirt. Her partner's arm pulled it shorter than it was intended to be, and that made it more abbreviated than any dress in the room.

Her stockings were girdle-fastened and the full swirling skirt showed their sheen far above her shapely knees. The eyes of the stag line followed her around the room.

Betty watched another popular girl dancing with Andy Adair, not a word or an inch between them. Their eyes were closed; Andy's lips were parted. As she watched, Andy opened his eyes, looked at his partner, then whirled her out one of the French windows into the dark.

Neither of these girls was clever. It must be physical appeal which made men like one. Did she have it? She knew she was brighter than these girls. She could more than meet them in small talk and the wise cracking chatter of the young folk. She determined to give this problem the same systematic study she had used in her school work.

The dance over, she asked George to take her home. They had come out on the street car, but Andy Adair asked them to ride home in the rumble seat of his roadster. He was the only boy in high school who had always had his own car. He drove with one hand, his other arm slipping along the seat behind his girl. She pillowed her head on his shoulder and sang jazz songs all the way into the city.

CHAPTER LXIII

It was a crisp, cold night, straight overhead the moon, pale, without substance, looked as if it had been fastened there with thumb-tacks. The black trunk of the elm seemed to stretch out its great leafless arms toward her yearningly as she walked past it.

Square patches of light from the windows poured into the fast darkening shadows that were slowly descending upon the house.

Even the windows seem to be sending me a welcome, thought Byrd, with a strange, burning sensation creeping along her white throat. She swallowed hard.

She'd have to think of some funny stories to tell Mandy so that she wouldn't begin weeping as soon as she saw her. She'd be very gay and flippant. She'd tell her her father's perennial story about the colored lady who had two beaux.

Byrd was waiting for Pat and Chet. She was standing on the walk looking at the house.

The windows seemed to twinkle like prisms with the color and light that shone from inside.

For an instant, she could imagine little faces gleaming in them. Baby faces!

"It's one of the most expressive houses that it's ever been my privilege to meet," said Byrd, almost aloud, and with a tiny smile at the idea. "It's really got a personality all it's own."

"Chet's putting the car into the garage," said Pat, her voice hinting a suppressed excitement. "He thinks it looks like rain, but he says we're to go on in."

"Rain!" began Byrd. "With a moon like that—"

But Pat had already stepped up to the door and pressed the button while Byrd hung back in the shadows.

But immediately she turned to Byrd and said nervously:

"Oh, I left my bag in the car. I'll run back and get it."

Byrd, panic-stricken, tried to stop her as she brushed by and dashed down the steps.

She couldn't walk into the house and meet those people alone. She couldn't!

She turned in terror to follow Pat, but before she had reached the lower step, the door had opened.

She was trembling from head to foot with a nervous excitement.

She came back slowly, and then glanced up.

There stood Larry, silhouetted against the light! The rays of color seemed to separate one from the other like a spectrum, and danced and vibrated around his head.

Something hard as metal seemed to press upon her lungs, and she found she couldn't breathe. She felt as if she were dying and were watching her spirit move away from her body, leaving it stone.

Like a complete drama, the moment seemed to hang tensely between them.

Suddenly Larry swept her through the door and she was in his arms. They stood without speaking, their lips laid against each other, and their hearts fusing in a common beat. He drew her, still dazed and bewildered, into the hall and closed the door behind them.

Byrd looked at him as if she were still dreaming, a pitiful, beseeching look that begged him not to destroy the illusion.

"Just can't believe it, can you, darling?" he asked, smiling down at her.

He drew her into the living room and took off her hat and coat.

She shook her head. The bright tears that edged her deep, tangled lashes looked like tiny necklaces of transparent jewels. They were the bright symbols of a happiness that was lighted deep within.

"Pat and Chet!" she reminded him. "You've locked them out!"

"You bet I have," said Larry, exultantly. "I've locked out the whole world tonight."

"What does it all mean, Larry?" asked Byrd, tremulously.

"It means that I've bought this house! It's bought and paid for, and it's in your name!"

He kissed her again. Then he placed her gently in the big, upholstered chair. With eyes brimming with sudden tears, he kissed the top of her bronze hair, softly, reverently, like a prayer. She caught the fervor of their first meeting. Larry had kissed her just like that before they had ever exchanged a word.

Then, with a groan of contrition, Larry dropped to his knees at her feet and buried his head in her lap. His big shoulders shook, and his body, built like a hull of a ship, moved as if caught in a sudden storm. Finally he lifted his face to hers.

"Can you forgive me ever for all the pain I've caused you?" he whispered.

And Byrd gathered him, like a little child, into her arms.

Hand-in-hand, like two children, they went through the house. Byrd touched lovingly the pieces of furniture that they had bought together just a few months ago. She felt now that she must have died during those days of their separation and this was the resurrection. They went upstairs and Byrd looked rapturously at the familiar walls and furniture of their bedroom.

The rooms were shining with fragrant cleanliness.

"Why, the house looks as if it had just come back from the dry cleaners!" she exclaimed.

The odor of browned butter and fresh vegetables floated up the stairs.

"Dinner," announced Larry, "is being served in the dining car ahead."

As they descended the stairs, arm-in-arm, Byrd was about to remark that there was a secret hand behind all this magic. She wanted to know how it all happened to happen! Then she saw a great hulk of a black figure in a spotless white apron sweep toward her, and she found herself on a heaving precipice which turned out to be Mandy's ample bosom.

"Hallelujah, bress de Lord, bress all his angels and make a joyful noise unto de Lord!" She closed her eyes for a moment. "Oh thank Lord my bressed chile come home again!" she said in a low voice her tones muffled with emotion.

"Mandy! My Mandy Ammonia!" was all that Byrd could say, and they wept together, first crying and then laughing.

"But, Mandy," said Byrd, reproachfully, "I wanted to hear you say, 'Shut yo' face'."

"Yes ma'am shut yo' face ef I wasn't surprised! Mister Brown ing done tole me we was havin Miss Pat and her husband fo' din ner!"

They sat down to consomme.

"She's planned a 'bankwet' fi for the queen of Rumania," sai Larry, "the sly bird really guesse it was to be for you."

Byrd barely touched her brot Mandy stood behind her with reproachful eyes and so she quickl drank it.

Then came the southern dis which made all good southern cook famous, roast duck and wild ric with vegetables and salad.

Between courses Byrd and Larr sat on one chair and hastily move back to their own places when th dining room door began to swin Then behind Mandy's back, Larr dropped a string of butterfly kisse from her forehead down he straight, little nose, over her so lips, down to her white shoulder.

He looked at her longingly as this intimate hour had revealed he to him for the first time like an u expected star which had been r mote but now was near and warm

Byrd could now think of Larr bending tenderly over a tiny for in a cradle.

They had their coffee in the li ing room in front of the snappin and crackling logs in the fireplac Words seemed unequal to the o casion and they felt back on the silence that was so much mo electric.

"I'd like to talk to father," sa Byrd, moved by a sudden inspir tion. "Will you put in the ca dear?"

The call was put through quick and Byrd trembled with exciteme as she put the receiver to her ea

"Hello, Jimsy," she said, with slight tremor in her voice, "M Lawrence Browning speaking." S smiled at his answer. "Larry and have just finished dinner." She l tened again. "Mandy's, of course She laughed again. "I'll say she c beat anyone in our family—whi means me! We're calling you give you a special message. Liste dad. Is your heart pretty stron Can it stand a shock? Well, thought you might like to know now, wait until I get through ta ing, you funny, old thing—" s turned slightly to include Larry the message—"that you're going be a grandfather soon."

At his end of the line, Jim Han ton jiggled the hook up and dow excitedly, but nothing but a dist whirr met his ear.

Larry had picked Byrd up bod and was holding her in his arms

WASHINGTON MAN COMPLETES ARK TO ESCAPE NEXT FLOOD

OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. 31.—The "Ark of the Pacific Coast," built to carry followers of the Lord to highest lands when He floods the Pacific Coast, rides on Puget Sound under the shadows of the dome of the state capitol.

The "Ark," built by a hermit named William Greenfield, is one of the strangest ships ever constructed.

Youth, middle-aged and aged are following in the paths of sin, says Greenfield, who has termed himself "captain" of the queer craft, and who has built the "Ark" in answer to God's revelations, to carry him and non-sinners across the ocean to higher lands when He invokes the penalty on sinners.

"Captain" Greenfield is aided in his work by one known to him as Michael. The "Twentieth Century Noah" says that God named Michael to assist him in preparing the vessel.

The vessel floats peacefully on the harbor awaiting the call which Michael says will come in two years, and which Greenfield says will come in one year, apparently neither knowing just when the deluge is to inundate the Pacific Coast.

Not for Animals

Greenfield has made it plain that he will not carry any animals with him when he takes the journey. He plans on making only a short voyage with the ship.

The hull of the craft was constructed by Greenfield at an Olympia mill in 1922, and floated to its present location, where at low tide it rests in a specially constructed cradle to keep it clear of mud.

The boat is anchored near the end of one of the arms of Puget Sound, approximately a mile from the dome of the new capitol. One inspired by man and the other by God, so says the "prophet."

100-horsepower motor is located in the hull. Installation of the motor has not been completed. The craft carries no propeller.

Piano for Hymns

The first deck of the "sin-saver" is fitted up for living quarters, where the modern "Noah" spends much of his time, probably pondering over the present state of the world. The tiny room in which he meditates, is jammed with odds and ends. A small piano, in need of tuning, fills one corner. It is to be used by Greenfield after the "Ark" has landed on dry land, for singing hymns of praise.

The room is lined with sheet-metal and painted white. Toward the stern another room is located, to be used as a guest room for visitors. A narrow walk is provided along the rail of the stern where a ladder leads upward to the top of the deck. This deck is roofed over to keep the rains, that are slated to fall during the tidal wave, back.

Greenfield is of slight build, medium height and about 60 years of age. He is of English descent, speaking with an English accent, but was born in Illinois.

ZIMMERMAN

In spite of the inclement weather a large crowd of friends and neighbors attended the funeral of little Genevieve Darding at the church at Zimmerman, Jan. 18, 1929.

She had been seriously ill with pneumonia following the flu for nearly ten days, and medical skill and skilled nursing and care availed nothing. A few weeks before taken sick she celebrated her third anniversary and with joyous smiles dropped her birthday offering in the birthday mission bank at Sunday School, and the audience repeated the birthday wishes, little thinking how soon the "beautiful birthday in heaven" would arrive for Genevieve.

Four girls, Misses Mary Haverstick, Thelma and Amy Turner and Catherine Koogler acted as pallbearers.

Rev. Eidemiller conducted the services.

Interment in Mt. Zion Cemetery.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Darding, and sister, Josephine, almost six, survive.

The heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends is extended to the bereaved family.

Mrs. George Williamson spent a recent week end with her mother, Mrs. R. Snyder in Columbus.

Norman Coy is attending an electrical school in Chicago.

Rev. J. A. Robinson preached a splendid sermon in the interest of missions, January 20.

At the January business meeting at the church here, very gratifying reports were given by the various treasurers. The church treasurer reported a balance in the treasury after all obligations were met and a larger amount paid to missions than in former years. The building fund amounted to $3,622.42, January 4.

The six months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bare at Belmont, has recovered from flu and almost pneumonia. Also Audry Zink, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Zink is well after a serious attack of pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Verne Lewis and four children were recent guests of the former's nephew Wilbur Lewis and family on the Hanes-Ferguson farm. Both families were sick with flu but have recovered.

Mrs. H. M. Stewart and daughter Nadine have been confined to their home with "flu" and complications.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Durnbaugh moved into their new bungalow on the Xenia Pike Saturday.

WASHINGTON MAN COMPLETES ARK TO ESCAPE NEXT FLOOD

OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. 31.—The "Ark of the Pacific Coast," built to carry followers of the Lord to highest lands when He floods the Pacific Coast, rides on Puget Sound under the shadows of the dome of the state capitol.

The "Ark," built by a hermit named William Greenfield, is one of the strangest ships ever constructed.

Youth, middle-aged and aged are following in the paths of sin, says Greenfield, who has termed himself "captain" of the queer craft, and who has built the "Ark" in answer to God's revelations, to carry him and non-sinners across the ocean to higher lands when He invokes the penalty on sinners.

"Captain" Greenfield is aided in his work by one known to him as Michael. The "Twentieth Century Noah" says that God named Michael to assist him in preparing the vessel.

The vessel floats peacefully on the harbor awaiting the call which Michael says will come in two years, and which Greenfield says will come in one year, apparently neither knowing just when the deluge is to inundate the Pacific Coast.

Not for Animals

Greenfield has made it plain that he will not carry any animals with him when he takes the journey. He plans on making only a short voyage with the ship.

The hull of the craft was constructed by Greenfield at an Olympia mill in 1922, and floated to its present location, where at low tide it rests in a specially constructed cradle to keep it clear of mud.

The boat is anchored near the end of one of the arms of Puget Sound, approximately a mile from the dome of the new capitol. One inspired by man and the other by God, so says the "prophet."

100-horsepower motor is located in the hull. Installation of the motor has not been completed. The craft carries no propeller.

Piano for Hymns

The first deck of the "sin-saver" is fitted up for living quarters, where the modern "Noah" spends much of his time, probably pondering over the present state of the world. The tiny room in which he meditates, is jammed with odds and ends. A small piano, in need of tuning, fills one corner. It is to be used by Greenfield after the "Ark" has landed on dry land, for singing hymns of praise.

The room is lined with sheet-metal and painted white. Toward the stern another room is located, to be used as a guest room for visitors. A narrow walk is provided along the rail of the stern where a ladder leads upward to the top of the deck. This deck is roofed over to keep the rains, that are slated to fall during the tidal wave, back.

Greenfield is of slight build, medium height and about 60 years of age. He is of English descent, speaking with an English accent, but was born in Illinois.
